Security, Three Kinds Rum for the Quintuplets Money Is Not All Apprentice Reporters?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

President Roosevelt's important message to Congress, outlining his plan for a bigger and better "New Deal," mentions three great objectives as "the minimum promise that we can offer the American people." This "minimum" comes near to an Utopian ideal compared with usual conditions.

The President says every American is entitled: First, to "security of home," which presumably means a home that will not be taken away by mortgage holders, tax collectors, etc.

Second, "security of livelihood," which would mean a guarantee of desirable jobs for those willing to work.

And, third, "the security of social insurance," which would mean an insurance system, making good with cash any failure of jobs and incomes.

The President says: "We are working toward ultimate object of making it possible for American families to live as Americans should."

Hitherto, Americans themselves have been expected to make it possible to live as Americans should, by working and saving. If it can be done without that, by government, so much the better and easier.

It is an important presidential message. You will read it today.

The Canadian quintuplets, five little girls in a row, are still alive, doing better than might be expected. One has gained three and a half ounces, another has recovered from a cold. Some will be shocked, all interested, to learn that with each feeding the doctor until today gave the five little girls "rum in minute amounts. Brandy is the usual thing, but I didn't have any, and so I use rum. They seem to enjoy it, and stick out their tongues when the rum appears at feeding time."

For feeble little babies and feeble old people doctors say "minute doses" of alcohol are beneficial, a few drops for the baby, a few teaspoons full for the old.

The Russian newspaper Pravda warns Japan not to start a war, "because Japan could not afford it."

Pravda tells Japan she would have to spend at least eleven thousand five hundred million yen the first year and need 1,500,000 regular soldiers in the field and a reserve of 1,500,000. Such expenditures, says Pravda, would cause frightful inflation of Japanese money, great suffering and rebellion among the people. The Japanese might

SARAZEN TAKES LEAD IN OPEN

Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, June 9—Lighthorse Harry Cooper of Chicago lost a great chance to crack Merion's elusive par this afternoon but shot a 71 for his final round of the United States open golf championship and posted a 72-hole aggregate of 285 that offered a target for the somewhat erratic leaders to shoot at, in their belated drive down the stretch.

Starting late, Gene Sarazen, who had a slim one-stroke margin at the close of the third round with 218 for 54 holes, needed all his resources in the face of a hot pursuit. Bobby Cruickshank, with 219; Wiffy Cox at 220, and Olin Dutra,

Murt's Sister Refuses to Help His Bride

FRANCES MILLEN

NORMA MILLEN

Frances Millen said to her brother, Murton, in the shadow of the death chair today, that she "would not raise a finger to help Norma," his bride. Murton rejoined in his cell at Dedham: "If you do not I will never speak to you again!" Miss Millen is shown on her visit to Dedham jail today.

Norma, herself near complete collapse over the fate that has struck for her husband, the doomed killer, did not know today that the sister had refused to aid her fight—and that the other members of the Millen family may also refuse. Her trial begins June 20 as an accessory after the Needham murders.

CALL DOCTOR TO DOOMED FABER IN HIS CELL

BULLETIN

Norma Millen today, according to her father, Rev. Norman Brighton, begged for a chance to see her husband, Murton, and console him over the verdict that means death in the electric chair. Her loyalty to Murton seemed unaltered, he said.

Saul Messinger, friend of Murton and Irving Millen, and the government's star witness at their murder trial, was released from the Dedham jail late today. He was driven away from the jail by a guard.

By WIN BROOKS

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Kept in suspense for nine hours, Norma Brighton Millen, bride of the convicted killer and bandit, Murton Millen, collapsed when informed today by a woman keeper that her husband had been convicted of murder in the first degree.

"Oh, it can't be!" she cried, as tears started from her eyes. "Why did they do it?"

District Attorney Dewing visited the jail late today and arranged for special precautions in guarding Murton, his brother and Faber.

Visits of relatives are to be shortened and all privileges of the prisoners cancelled. The jail will remain under heavy guard of state troopers.

Dewing said he would seek permission from Judge Brown to transfer the convicted men to some stronger institution.

Abe Faber suffered a complete nervous collapse this afternoon shortly after his mother ended a visit with him. Dr. Charles Benson was summoned. Jail attendants said Faber was very sick.

Faber stretched his hands through the bars of the cell door when his mother appeared.

"Mother—Mother—" he said.

Both sobbed and Mrs. Faber later fell to the floor in a faint.

Sentence of the three men will not take place for at least 20 days due to plans of the defense to file exceptions.

Full details were told Norma by her father, Rev. Norman Brighton, this afternoon. She had been in collapse for four hours, following receipt of the first news—the bare news of the fatal verdict—from a girl employe.

Led to Believe Jury Was Still Out

Norma, as soon as she awakened, had asked for news of the verdict, and she seemed wan and worried, but she was not then informed. She was led to believe, first, that the jury was still out.

Even the other women prisoners avoided her. They did not wish the sorry job, and they knew long before Norma did that her husband must go to the chair, for news

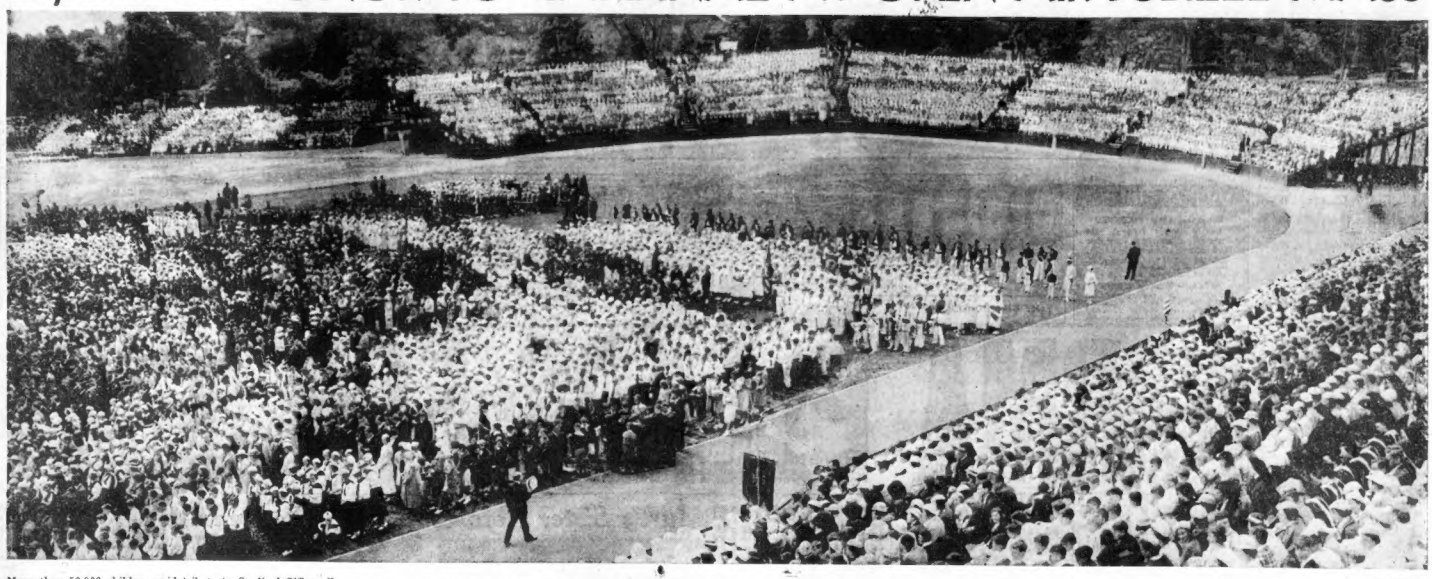
50,000 IN HONOR TO CARDINAL AT OPEN AIR JUBILEE MASS



More than 50,000 children paid tribute to Cardinal O'Connell at the Boston College athletic field, today. It is the second day of the golden jubilee services marking a half century of the Cardinal's service to the Roman Catholic Church. In his address to the children, the Cardinal recalled his days as a curate in Medford and the West End, when he was in charge of the children of those parishes. ## Cardinal 'Delighted' by Children's Tribute

In the shadow of the towers at Boston College, Cardinal O'Connell was paid homage and tribute today by more than 50,000 children on the second day of his Golden Jubilee observances, marking a half century of service as a Roman Catholic priest.

Never before in the history of this city has there been such a religious spectacle as the one witnessed today on the campus of the Cardinal's alma mater, Boston College.

Little children, of kindergarten age to those of members of high school senior classes garbed in bright costumes, girls in white and boys in dark suits, and the bright costumes of the scores of bands and life and drum corps thronged Alumni Field to capacity.

At the start of the solemn mass, celebrated by His Eminence, the sun seemed to be hidden in the clouds, but as the ceremony reached its peak, the consecration of the holy mass, old Sol suddenly broke through the clouds.

Several of the little children standing on the field fainted during the lengthy ceremony and were treated at emergency stations. Doctors and nurses from St. Elizabeth's hospital were in attendance.

After the close of the mass the Cardinal bestowed a special papal blessing on the children on behalf of His Holiness Pope Pius XI.

The Cardinal today was the recipient of a letter of felicitation from the Vatican City in which The Holy See conveyed blessings to the children and people of the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston.

Responses in the mass, sung by the Cardinal himself, were by a choir of 500 children.

Elevated officials placed 350 buses and 175 street cars into service to handle the huge throngs. Buses from other cities in the archdiocese, carrying the youngsters, numbered nearly 150.

Traffic in the vicinity of the Heights was at a standstill for more than two hours following the tribute.

This afternoon Cardinal O'Connell was paid homage and respect by Harvard University when he becomes the University's guest at a musical festival in Harvard Stadium, where Edwin Franko Goldman is guest conductor.

Tomorrow, on the third and closing day of the Cardinal's Golden Jubilee ceremonies, the public is invited to attend a solemn high mass in the open air at 10 o'clock.

Solicitously, priests assisted Cardinal O'Connell from the open air altar at Boston College today after the Cardinal sang High Mass for 50,000 children. The service was the most impressive church ceremony in Boston's history. Hundreds of children from every parish in the archdiocese of Boston took part in the service. ## G. O. P. Names Bacon, Haigis, Hits 'Deal'

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Worcester, June 9—Amid enthusiastic scenes, the Republican state pre-primary convention today nominated by acclamation Lieutenant-Governor Gaspar G. Bacon of Boston for governor and John W. Haigis, Greenfield banker and former state treasurer, for lieutenant-governor.

The nominations came after the convention had assailed the Democratic national administration as an "octopus of bureaucracy."

Mayor George J. Bates of Salem has been agreed upon by the party leaders as the nominee for the United States Senator nomination. Bates' name will be presented to the convention by former Senator Harry Gifford of Salem.

3 AFTER WALSH'S TOGA

Opposed to Bates are Robert M. Washburn of Boston and Gardner Pearson of Lowell.

Bates, at first refused to allow his name to go in but was persuaded to reconsider his decision. Leaders had been working frantically through the night to find a nominee. Among those approached and who declined were former Senator Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, Representative Henry Cabot Lodge and former Governor Frank G. Allen.

Friends of former Senator William M. Butler were working in his interest but there was some doubt as to whether he had authorized them.

Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook was renominated without opposition. Attorney General Joseph E. Warner is also expected to be renamed.

Prior to the nominating speeches, the convention adopted a liberal platform calling, among other things, for a mandatory minimum wage law, unemployment insurance, for no distinction because of birth or creed, and the principle of a unified police system.

One-half of the platform, which contained about 500 words, was devoted to planks hitting various aspects of the New Deal, calling for a sound currency, a balanced budget and elimination of government competition.

PARADE FOR BACON

Bacon was put in nomination in a brilliant speech by Walter Meins of Jamaica Plain, one of his neighbors.

At the conclusion of this address there was a demonstration with a parade of bands and loud cheers for the Lieutenant governor.

An equally fine reception was accorded the nominating speech for Haigis for Lieut. Governor.

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Pigeon of East Boston, former school committeewoman, appeared to have the pole for the nomination for state treasurer. She was being opposed by three men candidates but the party leaders were said to favor Mrs. Pigeon as it would help to balance the state ticket.

In his acceptance speech Bacon, after expressing his deep appreciation of the honor accorded him, pledged himself to wage a vigorous battle between now and November to insure victory for the party.

"From this day forth the battle to redeem the state has begun," Bacon declared. "It shall be fought fairly, not by underhand methods, but by honest statement of fact. The people will be told the truth."

That the Roosevelt administration will be the big target for attack in the coming campaign was further revealed through slashing attacks on the Washington administration by former Attorney-General Jay R. Benton in an address after his election as permanent chairman of the convention.

G.O.P. Platform

We believe that two of the greatest problems which challenge government today are: First, the tragic plight of men and women who want work and cannot get it, and second, the tax burden which penalizes the thrifty, stifles personal initiative and comes to rest on the tired backs of the plain people.

A revival in business and economy in government are essential for the solution of these problems. To achieve this result we demand:

BALANCED BUDGET

1—A balanced budget.

2—Elimination of government extravagance.

3—Encouragement to business by the removal or the uncertainties born of continual experiment and arbitrary restrictions.

4—Elimination of competition by government with its own citizens.

5—Drastic curtailment of the unprecedented bureaucracy which has been assembled under Democratic rule.

We reaffirm our belief in:

1—A sound and stable currency which will preserve the value of the savings of the people.

2—The system of tariff protection, historically adopted by the Republican party alone, which has given to the United States, even in this period of dire depression, living standards far above those of any nation on earth.

3—The civil service laws, as opposed by the national Democratic party in all its recent emergency legislation.

ANTI-LYNCHING LAW

4—The enactment by Congress of anti-lynching legislation, and such amendment of the federal milk license as will give fair treatment to Massachusetts producers by recognizing their nearness to market and higher cost of production.

1—Return to the "pay as you go policy," so long fostered by the Republican party.

2—Revision of our tax laws particularly with a view to lightening the load now borne by the home-owner and rent-payer.

3—Legislation for contributory unemployment insurance or reserves through interstate compact.

4—A mandatory minimum wage law.

SPEEDIER JUSTICE

5—Speedier and more effective administration of justice to relieve congestion in our courts and to meet the challenge of organized crime and juvenile delinquency.

6—Better police protection for safeguarding the lives and property of the people through legislation to improve our police system and training.

Dexter W. Hewitt of Ardsley-on-Hudson, New York, and Frederick S. Robinson of New Gardens, New York, were believed to have been instantly killed when the car swerved from the highway and collided with a tree with such force as to wrap the auto's front completely around the tree.

STATE WILL GET BACK MILLIONS

Westfield, June 9 (INS)—Millions of dollars due Massachusetts from the Federal government in connection with relief work, will be distributed soon, Governor Ely announced today at his home here. The money already has been delivered to state officials in Boston.

The governor's announcement came in reply to Springfield city officials who asked the governor what had been done to terminate the dispute over outlay of federal money during the first two quarters of 1933. The money was used for civil works service which comprised work for women on sewing projects.

Federal officials objected to such expenditure and held up the funds. Governor Ely revealed today that on a recent trip to Washington he conferred with Relief Administrator Hopkins, who agreed the money should be paid.

FIEND SOUGHT IN LOWELL KILLINGS

True To Type

GILBERT SELDES

Gilbert Seldes

I have taken a lot of beating at the hands of movie ushers in my time—from rear-admirals and buck privates, from little girls in neighborhood houses and big men in palaces, from courteous ones and ex-members of Jack's Flying Wedge—all of whom instantly guessed where I wanted to sit and decided that I should sit somewhere else. It never troubled me much and I let them do it to me.

The other night I had a new experience. It was in one of those long, very narrow movie theaters which resemble the old converted store of the earliest days of pictures; two long aisles from the lobby to the screen and fire-exits at the screen end. When the picture ended the entire audience rose and started for the lobby; as I was in the nearest seat, I was the first to reach the head of the aisle. The usher barred my way. I was to go all the way down the aisle and out by the fire-exit. By that time the aisle was jammed with men and women and I couldn't take a step.

• • •

Other people protested. It was particularly absurd for us to go down as not one single person stood in the lobby waiting to claim our seats. The usher was firm. He stood like a rock. And meekly the entire audience turned and trooped down the aisle.

When we got to the exit we found out why. At the door stood a young woman selling pictures of Adolf Hitler.

For the picture we had seen was the propaganda film, "S. A. Mann Brand," a very well-made movie intended to prove that Communists and people with Jewish names and faces were the enemy of Germany and shoot down little children who parade in Nazi uniforms and that the Hitlerites are men of merit who legally sweep all before them.

• • •

There was a little applause when the youth who was destined to die received a framed picture and cried out, "Our Leader!" and more applause, scattering, through much of the picture. Then at the end came regiment after regiment of parading Nazis, with torch flares—one of the best mass movements I have ever seen on the screen, and from that moment the applause was thunderous. (The theater is in the German Yorkville sector).

• • •

After rejoicing in the liberation of Germany the audience accepted the discipline of a movie usher. It seemed to me a little unpleasant. The propaganda in the film was moderate enough—I have been told that it was tempered for American consumption; a lot of humor went into it, including the man who answers back to the radio. But the audience, I think, was not moderate. The audience was getting a deep satisfaction—some consolation for not having been there itself.

The Russian propaganda films I have seen were directed against Czarism and tyranny, so that they pleased me. Here is a propaganda film with which I am not in sympathy, and it frightens me. What you can do with 5000 feet of film to destroy the ideals of 5000 years is rather appalling.

THEFT MOTIVE IS ELIMINATED BY PROBERS

Cash Found in Clothes of Man in Brutal Double Tragedy

Lowell, June 9—Police today eliminated robbery as a motive for the fiendish slaying of a former Somerville couple as search went on for a clue to the mysterious killer.

Finding of $19 in the clothing of the slain man, Paul Caouette, 28, stepson of a Boston chiropodist and well known amateur golfer, threw out the robbery motive, police said.

Caouette was shot twice in the breast and his wife, the former Alice Meyers, of Highland avenue, Somerville, was beaten on the head and shot through the forehead.

The couple had been living on a farm here for the last three years while Caouette sought to recover his health.

His wife was one of 13 children of a Somerville business man.

NEIGHBOR HEARS SHOTS

The double slaying is believed to have occurred shortly after 3 p. m. yesterday. A neighbor, Louis Cellier, told police he heard four shots but believed someone was firing at woodchucks in a nearby wooded area.

Police are inclined to the theory the husband was slain as he returned home to find his wife being beaten by the mysterious assailant. They believe the wife was shot after being beaten and that the husband was slain in his auto as he drove into the yard. There is no evidence of criminal attack, police said.

Mrs. Caouette's body was found sprawled under a clothesline. Part of the washing had been hung out. The rest was in a basket. A blood-soaked towel was pressed to the head.

Caouette's body was found in a nearby henhouse. A trail of blood led police back to his parked automobile. Rumpled clothing and marks on the ground showed how his murderer had dragged him from the car to the henhouse.

Police believe the intruder entered the Caouette home by the front door and that sudden cries of the baby in the kitchen attracted the mother and sent her to the kitchen from the yard.

In the kitchen, before the gaze of the child, they believe the young mother was beaten and died to the clothes basket for a towel to stop the bleeding of an ugly gash in the head.

Continuing on their theory police said:

Caouette probably drove into the yard while the intruder was still on the scene. He died in the automobile from a shot that pierced his heart. The body of Mrs. Caouette was shielded from view of passersby by the house. Caouette was in plain view and probably was taken to the henhouse to enable a getaway.

Killed While Baby Wails

Mrs. Paul Caouette, who with her husband, was beaten to death in their Lowell farm home while their baby wailed in its crib. Police are looking for a fiend. Mrs. Caouette was the former Alice Meyers of Highland avenue, Somerville. Caouette was also a native of Somerville.

Rum Eliminated From Diet of Dionne Quintuplets

By Associated Press

Corbeil, Ont., June 9—The Dionne quintuplets, in the words of their doctor, are "total prohibitionists" today, for scientific devices have eliminated the rum used to stimulate them.

Instead of from spirits the infants now get their stimulation from an oxygen tank, which has been most successful in restoring vitality.

"The rum is not required now that we have the oxygen," Dr. A. R. Dafoe explained.

"The quintuplets are holding their own and doing as well as can be expected. Their bodies are filling out, the wrinkles in their skin are disappearing and their features are forming nicely."

Soon, if all goes well, the little sisters will be pink, normal babies, with wrinkles and their bluish tinge gone. They are fed human milk every two hours with only 2½ ounces distributed among the five.

The milk arrives in ice from the children's hospital in Toronto and is kept on ice at the Dionne farm home.

Available data on the families of Ovila Dionne and his wife show six sets of twins, but no triplets or quadruplets. On the mother's side there were four sets of twins.

Mrs. Dionne, 24, was allowed to leave her bed yesterday for the first time since the children were born 12 days ago.

Los Angeles, June 9—In many ways downtown Los Angeles is as remote to the dwellers in Beverly and Hollywood as Phoenix. They have not been to town for months. Big stores have their Beverly branches. And the smartest shops are often far out on Wilshire boulevard, the newer Fifth avenue and rue de la Paix.

Then there is Pasadena, which so seldom attains the headlines. Yet is one of the wealthiest and sturdiest suburbs. Many famed capitalists from the East and Middle West have been hibernating here for 25 seasons. The spreading residential avenues are among the most beautiful in California.

Over-staying my time here, San Francisco, one of the chief objectives of this jaunt, was denied and with regret. San Francisco and New Orleans are two of the most fascinating American cities for prowlers such as I. They should not be handled in quick gulps. But fondled, like meerschaums.

San Francisco, despite its ocean frontage, has insular pride, a pride that thrives on a rich heritage. Tom-toms never sound and civic fires are always banked. Serenely conscious of the sweeping grandeur of its proud hills as well as the majesty of its fogs, it invites no trade lasts.

Hollywood is vastly absorbed by the constant companionship of Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard. They dine frequently in public but seem totally oblivious to everybody save each other. They are always talking, not the worn table chat of steady diners out, but expressing the animation of minds that spark in communion. Sometimes they seem arguing brittlely and at sword points, and then in the ecstasy of soft confidence. It's quite a show.

The old time throaty Broadway actor of long ago is here. Every cafe has one strutting the table aisles at the busiest hour and often, like the fabled rooster, crowing a false dawn. New Yorkers and its dwindling Rialto is dead to him but out here his hope is in usual ascendancy. He is the type who never realizes he is in eclipse. For him there is always another chance. And out here it has been proved. Look at Joe Cawthorne, who always has a good job. And Lewis Stone.

At Ed Nolan's last night our approach by motor was suddenly heralded by a flood of searchlights illuminating the house and lawn. A nice welcome, of course, for visitors but a great protection at night where from a bedside push button they may be turned on at the slightest noise. An asset of many big estates.

Ted Healy was fixing his usual gassy sophistries as master of ceremonies at an impromptu affair and, looking at the list to be introduced, saw the name of a flaming-haired dance lady he used to know in the old days. So he stressed, as it were, her fiery tresses. She appeared a flaming blonde. "A new zinc roof on an old barn," he moaned in aside.

This morning we breakfasted on a radiant portico with Doris Kenyon and Will Hays—a bower edged with the glisten of dew-wet fragrant flowers. Gaudy birds of bright plumage—and may I add well mannered — wheeled overhead. It's tough to pack the duffle-bag and leave all this for a sunless, noisy niche in Manhattan. I might say duty calls but step out in the night a second. The truth is, O. oh well, you know, any fellow out traveling this way is likely to get overdrawn and everything.

My last meal in Los Angeles was with Jay F. Price and the attractive Irma Fraser. He had found a place on Pico featuring hamburgers like those at Canon's short order house back yonder. Jay has despaired of weaning me from columning to lead a better and more useful life. So we chatted reminiscently of Chet Young, Jim Clay, Horace and Mark Riley, Banty Biggerstaff and others of days when our orbit was so gloriously Boyville. But the restaurant was a sentimental wrench. It had not acquired the distinct Canon touch. The catsup bottle was ungummy, the pink paper shoo-fly missing and no despondent cockroach, so far as I could see, had ended all in the mustard.

People who work in hot kitchens know the value of cool, refreshing water.

All of which probably accounts for $2.50 received today from a group of kitchen workers at City hospital. They see the need for cool, refreshing water for Boston's children.

The city economy program decreed that $3700 could not be spent to insure cooling drinks at public drinking fountains. The $3,700 was for ice.

The Boston Evening American felt the move was false economy and the public now seems to think the same.

DOLLY SISTER IS FINED $750,000

By Associated Press

Paris, June 9—Jenny Dolly, one-half of the famous dancing team of the Dolly sisters, today was fined $750,000 and given a suspended sentence of three days in jail for evading payment of the luxury tax on her 51-carat diamond ring, which she bought in Cannes in 1928.

The ring was valued at 4,883,285 francs—which in those days was $185,000. The government tax would have been $32,500.

The ring itself was sold in an auction sale of Miss Dolly's jewels recently for only 1,625,000 francs—about $100,000.

The blaze was discovered by James McKenzie, milk wagon driver who sounded the first alarm. Fire officials ordered the second alarm on reaching the scene. Firemen battled the flames for two hours before the blaze was under control.

MILLEN BEGS AID FOR NORMA AS CROWD CHEERS DOOM

Sister Refuses to Help Bride "Who Did Nothing to Save Murton"; Faber Is in Collapse

By WIN BROOKS

had trickled within the confines of the jail.

After her collapse, Norma was treated by a matron. It was reported that she was in a highly nervous state.

She was not the smiling, soft-spoken Norma who had taken such delight in posing for photographers before her arrest. Norma is due to go on trial June 20.

A bitter clash over Norma took place between Murton Millen and his sister, Frances, in the jail today following the verdict.

The sister, who spent a half-hour with Murton, refused bitterly to heed his urgent request that she do everything possible to help Norma. He refused to see her again until she promised to help his wife.

Frances Millen spent a half-hour with each of her brothers. She visited Murton first and his first question was about his mother. When she told him their mother was all right he asked about Norma.

"I want you to do everything possible for her," he said.

"I won't lift a finger to help her! She did nothing to help you in your trial," Frances said she replied.

"You've got to. She's my wife."

"She didn't help you. Why should we do anything for her now?"

"She couldn't. She has to go to trial. Do all you can for her. She's my wife. Remember that."

"I'll Not See You Again Unless You Help Her"

"I won't lift a finger to help her."

"I won't talk to you or see you until you promise you will."

In her visit to her brother Irving, Frances said she noticed tears in his eyes but said he was still smiling. He told her he had expected to be acquitted. Murton also expected an acquittal for his brother but had no illusions about the verdict in his own case, he told his sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Faber also appeared at the jail today to visit their son, Abe. The father saw him first and spent nearly a half-hour with the convicted Technology graduate. When he came back Mrs. Faber went down to her son and remained for more than an hour.

The father, meanwhile, walked slowly down the street. He was visibly affected by the verdict and seemed to be in a daze. At first he refused to talk but finally consented to speak briefly.

Abe, he said, was calm and looked as well as he could under the circumstances.

Intimation that Attorney George Stanley Harvey, counsel for the Millen brothers would go to the U. S. Supreme Court if necessary was contained in a brief statement he issued today.

Attorney Harvey's statement read:

"On March 16, when Judge Brown assigned me to the defense of the Millen boys, I realized the high tension of the public feeling and the duties which were imposed on me as defense counsel.

"The jury has rendered the verdict on their judgment and conscience. They are to be commended for their faithful service to the Commonwealth. My only hope is that I have fulfilled to the best of my ability the duties imposed upon me as an officer of the court.

"I shall continue to discharge that duty, as far as it is possible, until I am relieved."

Death is the verdict.

It came in the midnight for Murton and Irving Millen and Abe Faber, with the cracking sobs of their families in the courtroom smothered by the howl of the mob outside.

Murton Millen took it first, eyes squinted, thin lips compressed. He sat down and turned to Irving.

"Stand up and take it," he said.

Irving stood with a trace of grin and took it. He licked his lips.

Faber, the Tech man, the gentleman machine gunner, got it last. He stood like a mute. His eyes were closed, his head rolled. He slumped—later to collapse.

"Burn and Like It!" Cries Crowd

In five minutes of a jury foreman's shouted verdicts all the piled-up drama of eight weeks of trial was crammed and the scales of justice swung into the fine balance. Outside the courthouse the crowd of between 2000 and 3000 cheered the flash, inside the courtroom even though the windows were shut, the cheer was heard.

Against the deaths of two Needham policemen cut down by machine gun fire on February 4 during the Needham bank holdup atrocity, 12 men of Norfolk county matched the lives of the three young men in the cage.

Five minutes of courtroom picture never matched at any other murder trial in the state and it was all over.

Surrounded by a cordon of deputy sheriffs and uniformed state troopers, the three doomed men—to be acclaimed next week to death in the electric chair—were dragged on reluctant feet to the courthouse portals.

The cheer that had echoed for the verdict turned to jeers for the men the verdict had condemned to die. The crowd pressed, sullen, muttering, booing.

"Now burn, you rats!" a man cried.

"Burn and like it!"

The crowd, many women in it, surged forward. Troopers and police, arms linked, forced them back. Male voices hurled vituperation. It did not appear to be a threatening crowd so much as one that wanted to heap abuse and to glimpse with satisfaction the expressions on the faces of men whose time has run. Photographers' bulbs flashed. There was a fist fight.

"Now burn!" a woman called.

Into the jail van, back to the jail, Murton Millen dragging the slumping Faber by the coattails, the trio was rushed. Faber made but one remark. Locked in his cell, his hands reaching above his head to the bars of the door, he sobbed to a trooper.

"I thought I'd have a chance to put my arms around my mother . . . just for a moment."

Faber's Crying Echoes Through Jail Corridor

That was Faber who never had . . . it was claimed by the insanity defense . . . any affection for the mother who bore him. If it was so, he turned back to that in the vanishing darkness today as a child turns back having glimpsed something untrue that lies ahead.

Faber collapsed. The noise of his crying echoed through the jail pit. Murton Millen paced his cell. Irving Millen sat on his cot and looked at his feet. They did not sleep, the three. The long sleeping ills ahead

Counsel for the Millens and for Faber announced they would seek to block early sentence and appeal to the Supreme Court. In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, the Millen action seeking to void the trial just ended has been pending for more than a month and will not be acted upon until next September.

Sweeping aside the insanity defense set up by all three defendants the jury said he was guilty ago found Murton Millen, 24, Irving Millen, 21, and Abraham M. Faber, all guilty of murder in the first degree for the machine gun killing of Patrolman Forbes McLeod, one of the two officers slain during the $14,500 robbery of the Needham Trust Company.

After a charge which lasted nearly three hours, Judge Nelson P. Brown delivered the case into the hands of the jury at 5:43 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Side by side, in sorrow and in hope and in dread, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Faber, Abe's parents, occupied seats in the front row where the mother, stoic until the last few days, sat at every session of the trial. With them was a woman cousin of Mrs. Faber.

Separated from this trio by only the arm of the bench was the girl who has been described as a sister of Rose Knellar, Faber's sweetheart. Rose herself was not in court.

Mrs. Millen Absent As Verdict Is Ready

In same row sat the entire Millen family except the mother. Between the father, Joseph Millen, and the brother, Harry, sat the three sisters of the Millen defendants, Frances fumbling a handkerchief in her hands. Mrs. Mary Goodman, Idalyn, the 18-year-old girl, weeping before she knew she had cause to, was during the tedious proceedings.

It was 11:15 when the jury sent word from the room that it was ready to come into court. A messenger was sent for Judge Brown and he arrived at the courthouse a few minutes after the clock on the tower of the white church, visible from the courtroom windows, had tolled midnight.

The courtroom under the four ceiling floodlights was as bright as day—a light that fell harshly on the makeup on the faces of the women present. The night outside was black, with hard stars burning overhead. The wind rustled the leaves of the elms.

Strangely, when the prisoners arrived, the crowd was silent. There were a few ribald calls. There was no pressing and no great eagerness to get near or see the trio. It was as if the crowd, as a unit, suppressed any manifestation of its feelings until it would be sure that what it hoped for had come to pass.

The prisoners, flanked by a bright blue wave of state trooper uniforms led by Lieutenant Thomas S. Mitchell, entered the courtroom at 12:13. Judge Brown took the bench at 12:17. A minute later the jurors filed through the rear door and took their seats in the box.

In the cage, Irving Millen grinned, then chuckled as Murton, a half-smile on his lips, wagged his head from side to side speaking to both his brother and Faber, apparently in an effort to cheer them up.

"It's a long haul," he whispered. "Get ready."

At 12:19 Clerk Robert B. Worthington polled the jury and at 12:20, the jury standing, he called:

"Mr. Foreman, have you reached a verdict?"

"We have," said Foreman Michael Doherty in a voice that was all but a shout. Yet you could not tell, from looking at his face, or for that matter at the faces of the 11 other men of Norfolk, what that verdict was to be.

From Death's Decree to Life

Juror Theodore F. Davis, 29, a linotype operator of 230 Winter street, Norwood, will no doubt always date the birth of his daughter, Marilyn, from the Millen-Faber trial. He was on the jury that doomed the three men to death. He had never, until today, laid eyes on Marilyn, for she was born while he was locked up for eight weeks. # $525,000,000 Drouth Aid Asked by Roosevelt

By Associated Press

Washington, June 9—President Roosevelt asked Congress, today, for $525,000,000 to finance the drought relief program the Administration already has undertaken.

"Large scale assistance by the Federal Government is necessary to protect people in the stricken regions from suffering, to move feed to livestock, and livestock to feed, and to acquire and process surplus cattle to provide meat for relief distribution," he said in a message to Congress.

Absolute freedom from the Administration to spend the money as it saw fit was asked.

"We are dealing with a rapidly changing problem, and it is important that the authorization be flexible so that funds can be allotted to the several Federal agencies as required," the President said.

DETAILS OF RELIEF

He detailed the proposed relief expenditures as follows $125,000,000 for special work program and human relief; $75,000,000 for livestock purchase in addition to the funds already available under the Jones-Connally act; $100,000,000 for shipping, processing and relief distribution of purchases; $100,000,000 for loans to farmers to finance emergency feed purchases and shipments; $50,000,000 for emergency acquisition of submarginal farms, and assistance in re-locating destitute farm families; $50,000,000 for work camps to afford employment in the drought area for young men, principally from cities and towns; $25,000,000 for purchase of seed for 1935 plantings, and for loans to get seeds into farmers' hands.

HADDOCK WIDOW FIGHTS APPEAL

Mrs. Frank O. Haddock, widow of one of the patrolmen killed in the Needham bank robbery, will fight any attempt to save the Millen brothers and Abe Faber from the electric chair.

"They must pay," she declared grimly. "It can't be too soon."

She told how the very mention of the names of the three youths found guilty of murder conjured up the picture of her husband's bullet-torn body. She has lost 20 pounds and her hair has turned grey since the tragedy.

She holds no hard feelings against the defense attorneys, realizing they were doing their duty but thinks the case has been prolonged unnecessarily.

MILLS CLAIMS MILLEN FUND

First claim of reward in the Millen-Faber case was made today by Walter Mills of Needham. The state had offered $20,000 and the town of Needham $1000 for information leading to apprehension and conviction of the slayers of Patrolman McLeod.

Mills claimed both rewards and filed an affidavit, attested by Police Chief Bliss of Needham, that he first showed that the battery found in the burned bandit car was not of standard type. This provided a clue that led to the slayers.

Federal National Compromise OK'd

The closed Federal National Bank, was authorized by Judge Hugh D. McClellan in United States Court today to compromise notes secured by mortgages on real estate in and around Boston.

MISS GILLESPIE MAY BE ASTOR BRIDESMAID

(This is the eighth in a series of articles relating some of the highlights in the lives of two of America's oldest and most illustrious families, soon to be united with the marriage of John Jacob Astor, 3d, and Miss Ellen Tuck French.)

By PEGGY JOYCE

In American social usage, the selection by a bride of a bridesmaid is an automatic testimony to the deep friendship and affection felt by the young woman about to be married for the attendant whom she selects to be at her side at one of the most important occasions in her life-span.

Miss Eileen Gillespie, erstwhile love of John Jacob Astor, 3d, was to have been married a few months ago and immediately selected as the first of her eight bridesmaids, Miss Ellen Tuck French.

Today the romance of Miss Gillespie has become but a memory—a rather unhappy and confused recollection. Her bridesmaid-to-be, Miss French, is engaged to the action and heir of the Aster millions.

For years, Eileen S. S. Gillespie and Ellen Tuck French were the closest kind of friends and mutual admirers.

Ellen Tuck French, a beautiful redhead of 18 years, and Virginia, her 16-year-old sister, practically grew up with Astor. Frequently one of the other has been mentioned as his possible choice for a bride long before the Gillespie-Astor romance.

Would Eileen ask Eileen to be her bridesmaid? And if she did, would Eileen decline to be a party to this spectacular turn-about? These were some of the questions that were on the tongues of the knowing folk who would "know all."

That, my dear children, is till a moot question. But Miss French is known to have sent a friendly little note to Miss Gillespie shortly after the announcement of the coming French-Astor nuptials.

(Monday's article will touch on the three-cornered affair which have played a prominent part in the history of the aristocratic French family.)

RADCLIFFE GIRL BATTLES MAN

Joan Ames, 17, Radcliffe College sophomore, today beat off the attack of a man who had entered her first floor bedroom at 22 Forest street, Cambridge and threatened her with death if she made an outcry.

Miss Ames, a pretty brunette, told police that she was awakened by the man's presence in her room. He was pulling off the bedclothes, when she opened her eyes.

She began to scream and jumped from the bed and began to rain blows with her fists on the face of the prowler.

"I was thoroughly frightened," she said, "but I bit him several times. He told me he would shoot me if I didn't keep quiet. But I didn't think he had a pistol."

Needham Worker Killed by Train

Angelo Vellali, 24, single, of 38 Holland street, Needham, was struck and killed today by a Boston bound train while working as a section hand on the tracks of the N. Y., N. H. and Hartford Railroad in Needham.

His father, Guiseppi Vellali, was foreman of the gang but did not see the accident.

Guiseppi accompanied his son on the way to a Boston hospital as far as the Highland station, West Roxbury, where he was pronounced dead.

The total fortune that Alexander the Great inherited from his father amounted to a little less, it is said, than the sum that Alexander gave to his teacher, Aristotle, or spent making scientific collections for that philosopher. This did not keep Alexander from becoming master of Persia, conqueror of a ruler who could have bought Alexander and all Macedonia with part of a year's income

Not even the able Pravda can safely predict anything about the next war. Flying machines and poison gas will make soldiers on the ground unimportant, whether they number a million and a half or ten millions and a half.

Airplanes, properly utilized, or rather murderously utilized, might end a war before any nation would have the time or the need to spend much money.

Airplanes and poison gas are cheap.

Young men constructing a trade union for newspaper workers suggest that before becoming a reporter, or a "newspaper craftsman," every young man should work three years as an apprentice.

That would not have suited Charles A. Dana or some others. The late Albert Brisbane persuaded Greely to give Charles A. Dana a job on the New York Tribune, although Greely said he did not want Dana "because all those Brook Farm people are lazy."

Dana had been briefly interested in Brook Farm. Greely hired Dana to read exchanges at five dollars a week and at the end of six months Dana was the managing editor.

W. R. Hearst would not have profited by a three years' apprenticeship. When very young he took the San Francisco Examiner and in less than three years the Examiner had more circulation, more influence, and more profits than any competitor.

Some men could not be made into good reporters by a thousand years' apprenticeship, some, like Boswell, are born good reporters.

MAYOR SPEAKS TO WORKERS' AID IN PAY DRIVE

Mayor Mansfield today summoned to his office 40 employes representing 7500 city workers in departments under his control and asked them to cooperate with him in his drive to keep existing municipal wage cuts in effect during 1935.

The Mayor's action was regarded by City Hall observers as the most unusual ever to occur there.

Existing pay cuts amounting to five, 10 and 15 per cent, are to expire on December 31, next.

The Mayor now has a bill pending before the Legislative committee on rules calling for extension of the provision of the original pay cut bill through 1935.

Indications are that the committee on rules will take no action on the bill at this time. Unless the committee reports it out the matter cannot be considered by the General Court.

It was in an effort to bring pressure upon the committee that the Mayor today appealed to workers to assist him in his drive to keep their wages at their present level.

"We are to have a discussion concerning extension of present wage reductions," the Mayor said. "I want to see if I can get the cooperation of employes on the bill pending before the House committee on rules—the bill to give me the right to continue pay cuts in 1935."

THOUSANDS SEE JUNIOR PLANE FESTIVAL

Thousands of men, women and children thronged the Municipal Airport, East Boston, this afternoon for the New England Air Festival, a thrilling program for Junior Birdmen and their friends.

The festival, which started promptly at 1 p. m. with the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner," culminated a month's preparations for the first annual field day of the Junior Birdmen.

DREYFUS SPEAKS

Leading the list of speakers was Carl Dreyfus, publisher of the Boston Evening American. He urged his listeners to take a greater interest in aviation and make New England the most air-minded section of the country.

He appealed to parents to encourage their children in model-making and in their interest in the air.

Other speakers on the program were: Lieutenant Louie Ross, Boston wing commander of the Junior Birdmen; Frank McLaughlin, squadron commander, and Miss Melva Doyle, a member of the tailspin unit of the Junior Birdmen.

The throng was taken on an inspection tour of the airport and was later entertained with a series of spectacular exhibitions by noted fliers. Army planes also entertained with battle maneuvers.

Among them were Crocker Snow, John H. Shobe, John Polando, Mrs. "Teddy" Kenyon, of Newton, "Bob" Love and Joshua Crane.

SET DISTANCE RECORD

Polando flew with the late Russell Boardman to Turkey in 1931 in an transatlantic non-stop flight of more than 5000 miles which broke the distant record.

Mrs. Kenyon, was named "Miss America of the Air" in the American Legion meet a few years ago.

Crocker Snow, Joshua Crane and "Bob" Love, are among the foremost pilots of New England.

HARVARD Goes to IRELAND

Professor C. W. Du Pertuis of Harvard has just completed the first step of an interesting survey of the Irish people and Irish life. Scientific findings show the typical Irishman to be a fellow with dark hair and blue eyes; a fellow who is hospitable to strangers and loves a good story. ## Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

Cab Calloway, the inspired colored youth who reduced the whine of the reeds and the blast of the brass to his own esperanto in music, is the main one this week at Loew's Orpheum Theater. He would be the main one, or chief boy wherever he was, on whatever stage, in the immodest opinion of this confirmed scoffer, Palm Beach under the light of a moon (everybody in the money), and the Paraguay jungle under the southern cross (if the southern cross straddles Paraguay). Calloway gets a merger of this and more, emotionally, into the miracles he and his dusty mates extract from the commonplaces of tin-pan alley, the limitations of their instruments.

George Holland

* * *

Reports have been filtering across the Big Pond about a command performance he was about to give in Buckingham Palace—just recently. I am not acquainted personally with the British consul, but I hope he will tear this up because I am going to say that Cab would have been positively inspirational and might have helped the gracious First Lady, with his rhythm, cadence and harmony, in her autumn choice of hats. He has all these incongruous effects on a choosey observer.

Cab's drummer is a master. When the drumstick is hurled through the air, I kept hoping there was a net below the precious stick, but it continually fell safe. All his boys are great, and his instrumentation and arrangements are perfect.

Ada Ward and Nicodemus, as part of the Calloway 50 minutes, are unimpeachable as entertainers. And there is a picture, but you don't have to mind that very much. If you are a stayer-over at pictures, you will enjoy it—waiting for Calloway.

Dickie Moore, the seven-year-old wonderboy, is in the film, and it is called "In Love With Life," Lila Lee, who was one of Gus Edwards' child prodigies with Walter Winchell, Eddie Cantor and the Jewish George Cohan, the talks out of the side of his mouth). George Cleveland plays little Dickie's mother. I don't have to talk about the picture. You wouldn't believe me.

There will be six plays at least produced next season under the sponsorship of the American Theater Society, and three of them will be new productions by the Theater Guild. The Plymouth Theater will again be the society's headquarters. The first play will be Eugene O'Neill's "Ah! Wilderness!" with George M. Cohan in the starring role. The second may be the musical version of "Porgy," with George Gershwin's music, and the third will possibly be a return engagement of Helen Hayes in "Mary of Scotland."

Aside from a motion picture theater in Switzerland, there is no spot catering to amusement-seekers designed in the spectacular motif of the Cocoanut Grove, where, since last night, the sky beams through the roof, the stars gli mmer through a 40 foot square aperture and an attractive bar and stools and their occupants overlook what is going on beneath the outdoors blue. Downtown Boston has finally been bequeathed a place to dine and dance in comfort. The Grove had a tremendous opening last night and a summer season of unusual prosperity seemed assured. Ramy Weeks and his bandsmen—with Pete Fitzgerald and his banjo always understood—are at the peak of their form. Eleanor Talcott, I think, has found her home quarters, and the balance of the show is entirely entertaining. And—sssshhh!—the li-qur is the best.

Over the radio and in the columns of Hearsts and other newspapers throughout the country, Edwin C. His beautiful word pictures and his splendid diction have earned for him a reputation unsurpassed as a writer and broadcaster.

Myrna Loy Chosen for Lead in "Broadway Bill" With Warner Baxter

By JERRY HOFFMAN

Pinch-hitting for Louella O. Parsons

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, June 9—" . . . An' did ye hear the news that's goin' round . . ." The clans are gathering daily. I've wondered why Jack Warner hasn't made a picture about the Irish with all the representatives of the "ould country" he has in his studio. Jack probably thought of it and was just waiting for the right story.

He has found it. "The Irish in Us" will bring James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Frank McHugh and Helen Lowell as a New York family given to the wearin' o' the green, Jimmy will be a pool shark; Pat, a cop; Frank, a fireman, and Miss Lowell, their mother. Sure and if the Warners need any more Irish, they still have George Brent Ruby Keeler and Maxine Doyle to name just a few. Very interesting is the fact that "The Irish in Us" was written by Frank Orsatti, whose time usually is occupied in managing the business affairs of the stars.

Chatter in Hollywood

Oh, these snooty socialites! Jack La Rue had to sock one male society light in the nose because the scion of blue blood called him a "sissy gangster." He was man enough to apologize to Jack, later. Now one of our press agents is suing a widely publicized and publicity-crazy heiress for a salary which was never paid.

* * *

It will serve Hollywood right if Laura La Plante isn't permitted to leave England. The nicest news from there in a long time is that Laura has scored a tremendous hit in her first picture, "The Church Mouse," made by the Warners in their British studio. At the premiere, ¶ am told, fans mobbed her with delight. Now Laura has two more pictures to make for Warners in England and then has a contract with British International. Darling, visiting home from Elstree, is the happy bearer of the good tidings.

* * *

If it has been a matter for worry, relax. Anna Sten will remain in Hollywood and Sam Goldwyn isn't going to sacrifice the two years' investment in her. Briefly, the contract with Anna, which expired this week, has just been renewed. Sam intends to do better than one picture in two years with the Russian actress. "Nana" was made after a year of study by Anna. "We Live Again," "Under the Roofs of Paris," "Under the Roofs of Paris" will be followed almost immediately by "Where Love Goes," with Gary Cooper opposite La Sten.

Myrna Loy

More than a vague possibility is the appearance of Mary Pickford on the stage in Hollywood. Her home town has never seen her in a play. The record attendance attracted by Mary during her recent personal appearance tour has encouraged her to act in the flesh before her best friends. But I certainly not her severest critics. Mary can name her own price in considering three personal appearance tours offered her. Meanwhile, she has brought back with her just the type of story to do on the screen, a typical American romance. A Hollywood stage engagement would give her time to prepare it for the screen.

That whirring noise you hear is Edgar Allan Poe turning over in his grave again. Or maybe I'm wrong. Perhaps the great poet would like the idea of combining "The Raven" and "The Gold Bug" into one story for a movie. Universal is going to do it and, furthermore, to make it a horror-picture doubled and redoubled. will give us Karloff and Bela Lugosi as co-stars. Two hair-raising stories and two palm-chilling stars might be just the ideal merger for thrill seekers.

Revival Week at Fine Arts

The popularity of revivals at the Fine Arts Theatre brings several of the outstanding foreign films back once more to Boston. Closing tomorrow night is the brilliant and tuneful "Der Kongress Tanzt," musical satire of intrigue in Vienna, at the Napoleonic era, and famous among other things for introducing the diminutive Lilian Harvey to American audiences.

On Monday and Tuesday only, the first of the Rene Clair masterpieces, "Sous Les Toits de Paris," (Under the Roofs of Paris) will be shown. This romance of Montparnasse, featuring the engaging Albert Prejean and lovely Pola Illery, has captured the very spirit of the boulevards, and with the skilled direction of Clair combining deft pantomime with a minimum of dialogue, it remains by far one of the most striking and entertaining of the French films.

On Wednesday only George Kraska brings back the great classic of Dostoyevsky, "The Brothers Karamazov," starring Anna Sten in the days before her American screen debut. Fritz Kortner contributes one of his brilliant performances as Dimitri, and the entire film is a masterly presentation directed by the noted Russian, Feodor Ozep.

Rolling Bed in 'Sadie McKee'

A new and novel way of presenting a chorus is shown in Joan Crawford's new picture, "Sadie McKee," which has been held over for a second week at Loew's State Theatre. In a big night club sequence the stage at a given signal from the orchestra opens up and a huge bed rolls out onto the dance floor. In time to the music, the two girls, lying in geometric design, keep nimbly to their feet and go into their routine. This sequence shows Franchot Tone, Gene Raymond, Esther Ralston, Edward Arnold, Jean Dixon, Earl Oxford and others in the brilliant cast supporting Miss Crawford. Clarence Brown directed the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production.

Prize Winners Tell Plans in Film

Lucky American winners of big fortunes in the Irish sweepstakes are pictured in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, at Loew's Orpheum and State Theaters and they tell what they will do with their newly acquired wealth. George Hamill, a New Jersey tunnel policeman, who holds a ticket for $152,000, says he will continue working. H. F. Kronkenberg, Brooklyn letter carrier, a $50,000 winner, is not so sure that he will. Ollie McCarter, seven-year-old New York youngster who gets $75,000, will buy his dog a gold collar and Alla Von Bargen, Brooklyn waitress, says she will invest the $50,000 she won.

First pictures attending the birth of five babies at one time to Mrs. Oliva Dionne, young wife of a Canadian farmer, come from Corbeil, Ont. The latest views of the mother, the quintuplets and the incubator are reproduced and there are scenes of the humble home where the mother lies and of the doctor and then the nurses are shown preparing an eye dropper with milk, syrup and water to feed the tiny mites.

At Joplin, Mo., judges choose the "Smile Girl of the Ozarks" for 1934. There are thirteen beauties in the competition but Miss Elaine Arendale of Springdale, Arkansas, comes "smiling through" a winner.

Tulip time in Japan is celebrated by a group of Geisha girls dressed in gorgeous native costumes, dancing around a pool and then entering the fields to pick the blooms.

For the first time sound motion pictures record the greatest of all religious spectacles—the Passion Play at Oberammergau. One of the scenes shows the enormous stage with 700 of the villagers wearing palms and singing as the entrance of Jesus into Jerusalem is depicted.

Burns, Allen in 'Returns' at Met

By HARRIS MORGAN

You can make up your mind that it will be many months before you'll see anything more funny than George Burns and Gracie Allen, ably aided by Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, in "Many Happy Returns," at the Metropolitan this week.

The complete and utter insanity of Gracie and George on the world's most hilarious honeymoon will leave you limp with laughter that reaches its highest peak in the very last shot of a picture chock full of giggles.

Burns and Allen were canny showmen when they acquiesced without peep to Guy Lombardo's demand that he and his boys be given top billing in "Many Happy Returns."

The sorely harassed George Burns does not have to bear the entire burden of Gracie's dizzy non sequitirs in "Many Happy Returns." He has the despairing support of George Barbier who, as Gracie's father, returns from Europe to discover Gracie tearing down in mid-town New York department store to make room for a bird sanctuary.

A famous psycho-analyist discovers that Gracie's fixation is a lowly radio announcer (blurr) in her father's radio station. Gracie's father offers Burns ten dollars a mile for every mile he takes Gracie on their honeymoon. Then the trouble begins. They get as far as Hollywood (36 miles at ten bucks a mile), get all tangled up in a picture called "Murder While the Band Plays." That gay Guy and his band and Velos and Yolanda into the picture for a tuneful and rhythmic sequence.

But all in all, nothing could ever hope to top Gracie, a copy of "Love Story Magazine" propped up in her lap and a bewildered look on her face, looking at her lonely upper berth and trying to coincide George's indifference with the romantic ardors of the magazine tales.

On the miracle stage you'll see Sid Page and his stooges heading a show called "Fiesta" that is alive with color, especially when the Elida ballet holds the stage in their Spanish dances and color and stink sensuously though a hot-cha "Carioca." Sevitzky conducts the orchestra through the "Il Trovatore" impressions.

Sad, Sad Tale

This is the sad story of Oscar, who one day decided to make a name himself out of a job.

Oscar was "rented" by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio to work with Spencer Tracy and Madge Evans in "The Show-Off."

He got the job because he was a fine singer.

But Oscar couldn't keep his mouth shut.

He sang all day, and probably most of the night. He burst into song at all sorts of wrong moments. The actors hated him. The director, Charles F. Riesner, couldn't stand him.

And then poor Oscar was fired! Oscar, you happens, is one of the singingest canaries that ever wrecked a sound track.

Screen Shorts

Jean Harlow, when she was seven years old, had three little pigs that strolled her around in a red wagon, twenty-three ducks, two lambs and a pony with red harness for pets.

The Man All Creeds Honor on His Golden Jubilee

His Eminence William, Cardinal O'Connell

With fitting dignity and ceremony, the Golden Jubilee of William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, is being celebrated to give due honor to America's foremost churchman, the dean of the American hierarchy. There is more, though, than mere dignity and ceremony. It is far more personal than that. The hearts of his people are laid at his feet, for they have been his people since he became a priest. The same warmth and love is offered this priest on the 50th anniversary of his wedding to the church as is given to the father of a family on his golden wedding day—but this is universal. It is a magnificent tribute to the priest and to the man, not from Catholics alone, but from those of all creeds who respect the human qualities of one of the greatest soldiers of Christ. In the October of his noble life—a life dedicated solely to the cause of human suffering and misery—he is still as enthusiastic in the cause of Christ, still as virile in his championship of the oppressed, still as humble in his devotion to the Cross.

Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

Hugh Grantland's meeting with Avis Arlen and her knowledge of the wedding date confirms Madge's suspicions that Avis had intercepted her letter to Philip Veritzen.

CHAPTER 59

HUGH GRANTLAND looked down at me gravely as I asked him how he could possibly know that I meant Avis Arlen in my reference to "an utterly worthless girl."

"In all my acquaintance with you, I never have known you to speak disparagingly of any save Miss Arlen, and then only under the compelling provocation of her atrocious behavior toward your husband's niece. I never have had occasion to tell you how completely I second the opinion you have just voiced, but I intended coming over to the farm today to warn you of her presence in the city. When you spoke in the fashion you did after you had telephoned the Veritzen offices, I knew that you must have learned she is there. Simple, isn't it?"

I forced a smile to my lips.

"Elementary, my dear Watson," I quoted. "Yes, I spoke to her there."

I stopped, tentatively, and he took his cue.

HUGH'S MEETING WITH AVIS

"I saw her on the street, yesterday," he said, "and when she began to question me about Noel's marriage, I felt that she had some ulterior purpose in view, and that you should be warned of her presence in the city. She told me that she had but recently returned to New York."

Astonishment at this confirmation of my fantastic suspicion against Avis Arlen held me silent for a long second. Then my amateurish sound speech.

"It's true then! She did steal that letter and read it!"

Characteristically, Hugh did not ask my meaning, but something in his eyes told me that he had no inkling of it, and I hastened to explain.

"The letter which I wrote to Mr. Veritzen telling him of the date of Noel's marriage, was never received by him. As no one in the city outside our immediate family and your household knows of the marriage, the only way in which Miss Arlen could know of it was by reading that letter. Which I believe her perfectly capable of doing."

"Voila!" Hugh said, spreading his hands with a Gallic gesture totally foreign to him, while his eyes and lips held a quizzical smile. For a fraction of a second I was puzzled, then I realized that he purposely was injecting a bit of lightness into our colloquy, in order to atone for the melodramatic and sentimental note which he had sounded only a few minutes before.

TO SAVE MISS ARLEN

"Quite!" I returned, laughing up at him, and then he spoke again, in serious mien.

"You spoke just now of protecting Miss Arlen. Do you mind telling me just what you have done? Forgive me if I am unduly inquisitive, but I know your infinite charity and kindness, and fear she may have imposed upon you."

"Not in this case," I assured him. "What I did was entirely of my own volition, and I acted upon a sudden impulse. Mr. Veritzen asked me to invite Mrs. Arlen and her daughter to the wedding, and, asked me to get the address from Miss Arlen. I had a queer little intuition that he meant to watch Avis as she telephoned to me in order to learn from her possible confusion that she had tampered with the letter. So I pretended a sudden twinge of my ankle and asked permission to telephone him later. I also pleaded ex-nervousness as an excuse for asking him to let me talk to him instead of anyone else."

A MATTER OF TALENT-TAKING

"He would grant that request, I warrant," Hugh said quickly.

I ignored his manner, answered only his words.

"He did grant it, but now I am up against another problem. From what you have told me, I am certain Avis has in her head, or in her flight I to warn her, try to get it back —so that I—"

"So that you in some fashion can take the blame on your own shoulders, and shield what you yourself have called an 'utterly worthless girl'" Hugh exclaimed hotly. "If you're asking my advice, it is right here, ready. You ought not to do anything of the kind. Let Avis Arlen fight her own battles. From what I have seen of the young woman she is perfectly capable of protecting herself in any emergency."

"Not against Philip Veritzen's wrath, if he finds her out," I said stubbornly. "But I'll promise not to call her or speak to her about it unless she first speaks to me."

"It would be a bit awkward, wouldn't it?" he asked whimsically, "especially as you have no real proof of your actions."

"I suppose I might as well call Mr. Veritzen again and ask him for that proof," I said. "Please don't go away—" as he rose abruptly from his chair. "I shall only be a minute."

He sat down again, and I called the number. When I secured the Veritzen office, Miss Herve, Worthing's efficient voice held a suddenly apologetic note.

"I would gladly speaking to Miss Arlen before I call Mr. Veritzen. She says it is most important that she speak to you first."

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

Our English ancestors back in the seventeenth century pronounced "ornary" for the word ordinary. It was a perfectly proper pronunciation in those days when they called London "Lunnun" and China "Chiny."

DISCOVERIES THAT MAKE FOR EXQUISITE SUMMERTIME GROOMING

Gingham for Sun-Worship

"A GINGHAM play suit, some suntan oil, and thee!" the modern girl might carol up at the sun, and prepare for a lazy day on the beach. For such diversion, we offer this gingham play suit, boldly plaided, cut for the maximum of comfort as well as exposure, and having an unusual version of the halter neck. The canvas beach bag is fastened with a wooden harpoon. Both gingham suit and beach bag are available in Boston. The canvas skirt is not; but may possibly be a simple achievement for nimble fingers, using one of the rope belts every beach shop has. If you would like to know more about the play suit or the bag, phone Annice Brink, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

When Notrump Grand Slam Is Safest

By Josephine Culbertson

It is the general experience of Bridge players that Slams, particularly Grand Slams, are safer when played in a suit, except when the bidding has indicated that if there is a suit declaration the Opening lead may be ruffed by an opponent and the contract thus defeated. As in all matters of experience, however, there are exception, to this rule, and these can be readily recognized when the bidding develops that the greatest length held in the partnership hands in any one suit is of seven cards, whether divided 4-3 or 5-2. In these cases, if the top-card strength is sufficient, then a notrump is safer but the final notrump contract should not be reached until all the possibilities of playing the hand at a suit declaration have been explored and weighed.

An interesting example of this type of hand occurred in a recent Duplicate game in New York City. North and South were blessed by the gods of distribution with all the Aces, all the Kings and three of the four Queens as well as two of the Jacks. In other words, the only cards higher than the Ten-spot not held by the partnership were two Jacks and one Queen. Neither player, however, held a long suit, and while each had adequate support for one suit bid by partner, the length was such as to suggest the strong possibility, bordering on probability, that one opponent or the other might have as many as five cards in the suit. Only two of the nine players holding the hand reached the correct final contract.

The hand was:

North, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♢ (1) | Pass | 2 ♡ (2) | Pass |
| 2 ♣ (3) | Pass | 3 ♣ (4) | Pass |
| 4 ♣ (5) | Pass | 4NT (6) | Pass |
| 5NT (7) | Pass | 7NT (8) | Pass |

'Upside Down' Cake, With Lots of Fruit Is a Treat

By Martha Lee

MOST PEOPLE don't like things "upside down." They prefer them straight, on-the-level, up-the-keel, right from the shoulder, according to Hoyle, etc. However, it's not so with some foods, particularly cakes, and specifically a certain cake which has come to be known as an "upside down" cake. This cake has always been associated with that delicious fruit, pineapple, but there is no reason why it should not be made with other fruits, say peaches or apricots. And we have recently given you a delicious rhubarb upside-down cake.

Have you ever tried either of them? And why not, also, make an upside down cake oftener? There is almost no dessert in this cake line which people like better. And they speak of it in many homes as if it were a great and rare treat. It is a great treat, but there is no special reason why it should be a rare one.

PEACH UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

Melt one-fourth cup butter in a deep cake pan or large heavy skillet, add three-fourths cup sugar and stir over a low fire until sugar is melted but not burned. Put out evenly in bottom of pan and cover with well-drained peach halves, round side up. Beat two egg yolks well, add one cup sugar and beat creamy. Add one-half cup milk alternately with the following sifted dry ingredients: one and one-half cups pastry flour, two teaspoons baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt. Add one-fourth cup melted butter and fold in two- stiffly-beaten egg whites. Pour this batter over the peaches and bake in a moderate, 375 deg. F., oven for about thirty minutes or until cake is done. Turn out at once, upside down. Serve warm, with whipped or plain cream. Serves eight to ten.

APRICOT UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

Melt one-fourth cup butter in deep cake pan or heavy skillet. Add three-fourths cup brown sugar and spread evenly over the bottom of an 8-in. pan. Lay on top well-drained apricots. Cream one-fourth cup butter, add one-half cup brown sugar and cream again. Add one beaten egg. Mix one-half cup sour milk and one-fourth cup molasses and add alternately with the following sifted dry ingredients: one cup flour, one-half teaspoon soda, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon cinnamon and one-half teaspoon ginger. Pour batter over the apricots and bake at 350 deg. F. for 20 to 30 minutes. Turn out immediately, upside down, and serve warm with whipped cream. Serves eight.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

If there's anything I like it's a good-looking taxi-driver. I often say to Mamma, "Mamma, I may be silly but I do enjoy a ride in a taxi-cab better when the chauffeur is a handsome, well - set - up young fellow, and not the type that scares you at a year's growth every time he turns around.

"Of course, Mamma agrees with me. Mamma is very modern. But I'm afraid my boy-friend isn't. Mamma and I were discussing this very thing with Bit's, you know, just for conversation, the other night and he turned very coolish on me. He said he thought it was awfully low a girl, let alone a woman grown (looking daggers at Mamma), to flirt with taxi-drivers.

Now, Pandora, it never was flirting and I've tried to tell him but he won't listen. He insists it's nothing more nor less than flirting. Which is terribly silly of him but I don't know what to do about it. He's got one of those unchangeable minds, once it's made up it stays that way for keeps. If he only understood me better, he'd realize that I don't like good-looking men—that I'd never have tied up with him if I did.

Dedham. BLANCHE.

DEAR BLANCHE:

Yes, give him his hat and a couple of days. I'm surprised Mamma hasn't suggested this. How you and Mamma ever put up with this son of Old Man Gloom surprises me. However, it's not too late and it was a lucky accident that caused you to bring up the handsome taxi-driver question. It's just such providential happenings that save us blundering humans from a lifetime of ennui, sometimes.

PANDORA.

Mist-Deodorant, Depilatory and a Painless Tweezer Are Happy Finds

POSED BY ROSITA MORENO

By Juliet Shelby

HOW ARE YOU fixed for deodorants? You'll dance the whole night through—even 'till three o'clock in the morning and still be fresh as an April crocus—if you'll adopt this new way to personal daintiness.

It's a liquid deodorant which you spray on like perfume—under the arms, across the shoulders or whatever you desire to check perspiration. There is no deodorant quite so delightfully simple to use, and it keeps you as sweet as a geranium window box for hours to come.

The filmy mist gives an even distribution of the deodorant, without the annoyance of the liquid running down in drops to other surfaces. It dries in a nonce and the atomizer insures the deodorant remaining fresh and free from contamination. If you want to be happy as well as comfortable, you can't afford to be classed as a social offender these days. The distressing thing about body odors is that other people are annoyed long before you are, especially in hot weather.

* * *

See to it first of all, that you take a daily bath, not merely a dip in the briny deep, for it takes a warm water and a soft soap to cleanse the pores of the skin. If you're given to excessive perspiration, try using one or two teaspoonfuls of spirits of ammonia to every gallon of water you use for bathing. Buy it in and drug store.

* * *

The same specialist who introduced this dainty spray deodorant, has a cream depilatory that is safe to use and works like magic in removing superfluous hair from the body. You will find the task of keeping sweet greatly lightened if you will rid yourself of superfluous hair before using a deodorant. Take care of that today—it is the first step to loveliness.

For exciting stories concerning eyebrows come from Hollywood these days. New eyebrow personalities are wheeled overnight, as witness the magic of Garbo, Crawford and Dietrich. If you, too, feel that you are entitled to a bit of eyebrow, personality, bring on the tweezer by all means.

Eyebrows plucked to a thin line are less in favor than they were. But if you want to have a clean, well groomed face, wild brows with stray hairs growing here, and everywhere are even more unattractive than an odd-naked-face look.

If you are one of the sensitive group who can't tweeze without twinging, I know of a snappy little gadget that is painless. You grasp the hair in its prongs, press a little button and—snip! Out comes the hair, without pulling the sensitive skin around the eye. This automatic tweezer is found at the better beauty shops, and now for the first time it can be purchased behind the cosmetic counter.

* * *

If you are interested in the tweezer or the liquid spray deodorant that has just arrived in Boston, telephone to Juliet Shelby, Beauty Editor, to learn their names and where they can be bought. If you prefer writing for this information, send along a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby with your inquiry.

GIRL IN THE FAMILY — Marriage for Love or Loyalty — By Beatrice Burton

CHAPTER XX

Early in the afternoon Susan saw him pounding a small wooden sign on to a post at the end of the driveway. As soon as he came in she slipped out at the side door and ran across the dead wet grass of the front lawn to look at it. Painted in black letters on a white ground were the words, "Garage For Rent." Under them he had written in pencil, "Enquire Within."

The door of the old carriage house in the backyard stood open and within it, just visible from the street, were Grandfather Broderick's dog cart, high on its two wheels, and the victoria in which Susan's grandmother had done her visiting and shopping in the leisurely days of 30 years before. In the shadows behind them were things that the family had discarded from time to time. A cottage organ with pleated crimson silk behind the wooden fretwork of its front. A roll of cracked linoleum. Two brass bedsteads. A three-cornered couch that had been part of Lulie's "cozy corner" back in the days when she was young and every fashionable maiden in the United States had a "cozy corner" in the parlor.

There was enough room in the carriage house for one automobile, but there was no way of hoisting it. The doors hung loose on their rusty hinges, and there was no lock on them. "Some garage!" thought Susan on her way back to the house.

Lulie was waiting for her in the dimness of the rear hall. "Isn't that the silliest thing? Trying to rent that old rookery as a garage?" she asked in a whisper. "I've told him that sign will have to come down before Wallace gets back to town. His mother will be coming to call, I suppose, too, and we certainly don't want a thing like that out in front."

SUSAN TEMPTED

For a second Susan was tempted to tell her that it did not make any difference how brave or dismal a front they put up now for either Wallace or his mother—that she had made up her mind to break her engagement, and so they might just as well rent the carriage house and let it earn them a little of the money they needed so badly.

But this wasn't the time to break the news. Wallace would have to be told about it first, and his ring and watch returned to him.

Then, when it was too late for the family to argue with her about her decision, she would tell them about it. Then, and only then. It wouldn't be safe to tell them until she had completely freed herself from Wallace. They had talked her out of going to college. They had talked her out of a business school and the security of a job. They might be able to talk her out of breaking her engagement if they knew she was planning to do it. They couldn't really, of course, and yet—

* * *

That afternoon at four o'clock Susan, walking down South Main street toward the Public Library, felt herself a part of the bustling life of the wide gray thoroughfare, with its crowded sidewalks, its traffic policeman standing on a little platform in the middle of the street, its stores and offices. She was only an onlooker, watching other people as honking automobiles and clanging street cars.

Always before now it had seemed they went about the fascinating business of their lives—mothers and daughters hurrying along with the rapt intent look that women wear when they go shopping, girls meeting their sweethearts on street corners, blind to everyone around them.

Today she was one of them—on her way to meet Allen. She smiled at her reflection in shop windows as she went along, thankful for her trim slenderness and her color and the soft regularity of her features.

It was not ever a time that a woman knows just how she will look at she is, it is when she is in love, for she sees herself with her eyes veiled at that time; and today Susan saw h...h pleasure that the black caracul coat, that was all hers, was becoming to the fairness of her skin, and that her little old black hat was turned up at just the right angle above the clear gray of her eyes and the shining sweep of her hair . . . clothes didn't matter so much after all, she decided.

PICKING OUT BOOKS

Allen saw her when she was half a block away. The library and he came toward her. But she waved him back and held up the four library books that she was carrying for him to see.

"I have to return these and pick out four more books," she explained as they met, "before I do anything else."

Arm in arm they went up the steps into the big quiet building where Susan had spent so many hours picking out detective stories for Aunt Edna and love stories for Lulie—the kind of books that supplied what each of them had missed. For Aunt Edna, the excitement; for Lulie, the romance and the passion of life.

It was almost dark when they left the library at half past four. In the next block two motion picture theaters sparkled with red and white lights. The street lamps were shining out above the heads of the crowds, and a man with a basket tray of violets hanging by straps from his shoulders stood at the bottom of the library steps.

"Only forty cents a bunch, lady." He held out a bunch of them as Susan and Allen passed him.

"Let's buy a bunch for your coat, and then we'll find a place where we can talk," declared Allen, and, before Susan could stop him, he had dropped a silver coin into the tray and was lifting out a little round bunch of the wet dark flowers.

Susan fastened them into the front of her coat and they went on down the street. "Let's go in here and have some tea or coffee—or whatever girls like to drink at this time of day," Allen said suddenly as they reached the corner where the St. Vincent Hotel lifted its ornate graystone bulk above the street. The lobby was large and bright and full of noise and movement. A page went through it calling, "Mr. Aylesworth—Mr. Carpenter—Mr. Aylesworth—Mr. Carpenter—" A stout blond woman in a mink coat, that was exactly the color of the toy dog she carried under one arm, swept in through the revolving doors followed by a boy who fairly staggered under her bags and hat boxes.

In the dining room just off the lobby an orchestra was playing "It Must Be True," and the lingering twilight was blue in the high windows with their heavy silk draperies. Only three or four tables were filled, and Susan felt as if she and Allen were alone in the great softly-carpeted room when the waiter had taken their order for coffee and cinnamon toast and left them at a table in the corner farthest from the door.

"It's quiet here, isn't it?" Allen asked helping Susan out of her coat. "A very good place to get on with all the unfinished business of last night.

"TERRIBLY EXPENSIVE"

"It's terribly expensive, isn't it?" Susan said. The familiar little pang of pity that she always had for him shot through her again as she saw the shine on his blue serge coat and took in the cheapness of the silk in his dark blue necktie.

Then she was instantly sorry that she had spoken. He had wanted the afternoon to be perfect, no doubt, as any man would want his first gesture of hospitality toward his girl to be.

"But it's lovely just because it is delightfully expensive," she hastened to say. "My aunts used to bring me here to lunch sometimes a long time ago when we had more money than we have now. We used to spend whole days downtown shopping then. I always adored coming here."

She took her vanity box from a pocket of her coat and began to powder her nose with the aid of the vast looking glass that covered the wall beside their table. It was like a pool of still transparent water where the palms and the fancy tables of the room were reflected, and at the very bottom of it were Allen and herself close together. In the mirror she could see him watching her from his side of the table, the lines in his cheeks deep as he smiled.

"Cute," he said.

"What?"

"Your nose and your eyelashes and your mouth. You!"

"Thanks."

They looked at each other and said something extraordinarily brilliant and witty.

"What a lovely lovely time I'm having." Susan's face was flushed with happiness of the moment. "If you just knew how I've longed for something like this to happen ever since I've known you—and how jealous I've been of Mary Cullen!"

"Mary Cullen?" He shook his head. "Impossible!"

The waiter came back with coffee and toast and cream. Hidden behind a hedge of potted palms and oleanders, the orchestra began to play the newest song hit and the leader crooned the words in the wistful manner made popular by radio singers.

"I'm confessing that I love you.

Tell me that you love me too.

I'm confessing that I need you.

Honest I do—"

"You hear songs like that all your life and they never mean a thing to you," Susan said, her eyes on the coffee as she poured it, "until you fall in love yourself and find out what it's all about."

"I know that's true." One of Allen's hands reached out across the table and covered hers and the other one forgotten for a full moment. "I know because on the night of December 19th I saw a girl named Susan Broderick for the first time."

"Susan Broderick"—What a prim and proper name! She must be an old maid." laughed Susan.

"I'll like her name a lot better myself when it's Susan Sholes," Allen said, taking his cup from her. His eyes darkened as they fixed on the hand that held it out to him. "How long are you going to wear that fellow's ring, Susan?"

"I'm going to take it off this minute. I forgot that I had it on." Susan drew the glittering ring from her finger and tied it in a corner of her handkerchief.

Soothing Bath for Tired Eyes

Question—The nature of my work requires that I do intense reading all during the day. Of late, my eyes have become strained and bloodshot. What can I do to relieve their condition?

H. C. Menthuen.

Answer—For strained eyes, give them the health of lots of rest and the best possible care. Bathe them often with a week solution of salt and water, boracic acid or a good eye lotion. Smooth cream around them and cover them with compresses of cotton dipped in cold water and then in witch hazel, cold tea or other soothing lotion. Relax as long as possible.

Give this treatment as often as often as you can. Get all the rest and sleep you can. Stop often during the day and close your eyes for a minute or two. If this doesn't help, it would be advisable to consult an eye specialist.

Egg Treatment

Question: My skin is in a deplorable condition due to a recent loss of weight. Can you tell me of the "egg treatment" which has been highly recommended to me?

P. P., Back Bay

Answer: Beat the yolk of an egg lightly. Cleanse face and neck with cream and remove with tissues. Then apply yolk of egg all over face and neck. Just a light film of the egg. Let is dry, and if you have more of the egg yolk apply it and let it dry. Then apply white of egg over the yolk, let it dry and remain on about twenty minutes or half an hour. Remove with warm water. Then apply a little cream or soothing lotion and, if this is a daytime treatment, proceed with your makeup.

Since yolk of egg is oily and therefore nourishes the skin, and the white has astringent qualities that firm and tighten, this is an ideal treatment for any type of skin; clearing, freshening and rejuvenating.

Dull, Oily Hair

Question: Until three or four years ago, I never had my hair finger-waved. My hair is naturally curly and rather dry, and it never became oily or dull between shampoos, nor did I have a trace of dandruff. Since then, I have kept my hair finger-waved all the time, and it has gradually become oily, dull, and full of dandruff, only a few days after each shampooing. What is the remedy?

M. D., Bugleton.

Answer: If you believe finger-waving is the basic cause of your hair problem, why not discontinue it for a while? Seems to me that is the logical thing to do, especially as your hair is naturally curly. Get some of the handy little combs or the gadgets used to curl the ends. Perhaps, I think a natural wave is far more attractive than the "set" wave achieved by a hairdresser.

A Reception Bid

By Mrs. Beeckman

Dear Beeckman:

My mother and father received an invitation to a reception. This invitation also included me. However, I have been going with a young lady for a year or so, but the person who is having the party is unaware of this, as I have not seen them for some time. Would I be justified in taking my friend to this reception without further procedure, or should I write and ask for the privilege of bringing her?

Ben.

The thing to do . . . and it is very often done . . . is to write to the hostess and ask her permission to bring your friend to the party. I am sure that she will be delighted to send her an invitation.

READING-WRITING

Paragraphs from a Bookman's Note Book

By WILLIAM SOSKIN

ST. JOHN ERVINE, the British critic who was so strangely illtempered when he visited this country some years ago, finds himself annoyed with those of his countrymen who are "cockneyeising" the British language. He cannot understand why they find it pleasant or necessary to say "snaow" for "snow." He hates the sound of "The man hes a block hit."

Not that St. John Ervine subscribes to the popular American notion that the Englishman is a fellow with a monocle who keeps saying "hawth" for "bath." The Englishman does nothing of the sort, he says, with the customary British journaless gesture of contempt for Americans. And goes instead to criticize us colonials for saying "beth" instead of "bath." Into what part of America did St. John Ervine step, I wonder, in order to hear it pronounced "beth"? Or maybe he thought Fannie Brice or Lou Holtz were talking American when they pronounced the word that way in one of their dialect acts.

Recently I discussed the project of visiting England for a few weeks as a guest critic and a popular British novelist was advising me on the plan.

"Suppose," I said, "an American guest critic should start off by declaring the entire British book-reviewing game a racket, rotten with log-rolling and then go on to berate the second rate British country-life novel as a puerile institution. What would happen?"

"Oh," this woman novelist replied, "we should think you so quaint and quite American, you know."

College Boys

I HAVE been reading John Erskine's Bachelor—Of Arts. That is, I have read part of it. I couldn't get very far into the book. It's intended as a light, romantic story of a Columbia College freshman, with satirical implications.

Mr. Erskine's foreword suggests that he has tried to tell "the story of an average American college boy." "I have tried to report the average opinion of those boys among whom I have spent most of my days."

I wonder what Mr. Erskine was thinking about all those days. He couldn't have been observing the boys very closely. His characters in this novel are like no Columbia men I have ever seen. In my day at Columbia such people would have been suspended. I think they would be in any similar fashion today. At any rate, I'm willing to leave it to Columbia men. If a majority of Columbia freshmen will vote in favor of Mr. Erskine's book, saying that it is an authentic representation of an average classmate, I will sit on the steps in front of the Alma Mater statue and suck a nursing bottle for thirty minutes.

College Reading

WHAT does a Yale education do for a man?

Publisher's Weekly, a book trade paper, recently sent a questionnaire to some 280 Yale men who were graduated in the Spring of 1928 in order to obtain information on their reading habits. The answers showed that the average college graduate (speaking in general terms, since many of the men didn't reply) spends twenty-nine per cent of his leisure time in reading. Exercise and sports take up twenty-six per cent of his leisure, while thirteen per cent goes to music, the theater and the movies.

Here are the books listed as those most enjoyed by the Yale graduates:

Anthony Adverse, The Thin Man, Mutiny on the Bounty, As the Earth Turns, British Agent, Men Against the Sea, Of Human Bondage, Ulysses, Only Yesterday, Rabble in Arms, Work of Art, An American Procession, Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas, The Art of Thinking, and Brazilian Adventure.

But these books are the ones widely advertised, popularly acclaimed, chosen by book clubs and made generally into best-sellers. Yale graduates, it seems, follow the standards of taste formulated by a popular public.

In that, parents of Yale men, why you sent your boy to college?

Enemies

"THE quality of a critic is best to be appraised by the quality of his enemies. To analyze his worth it is only necessary to analyze the worth of those who detest him," says Mr. George Jean Nathan.

Well, I am detested by some extremely popular novelists, and nice people they are, too.

Marginal Notes

Child Slumber

THE easiest way to put a baby to sleep is not to have mama sing it a lullaby. Papa's lullaby is much more effective, the experiments of Dr. J. J. B. Morgan, of Northwestern University, indicate. Papa's bass notes possess more soothing power.

Don't hesitate to rock the baby to sleep in the good old-fashioned way. The new-fangled claims that it is harmful to rock a baby are in error, declares Dr. W. C. Stanley, professor of psychology at Johns Hopkins University.

And don't worry if the baby tosses about a bit in its sleep. All babies toss quite a bit, especially in the first and last half hours of their slumber. Dr. Glennville Giddings' experiments at Emory University reveal that any normal baby tosses about from fifty to one hundred times during the night.

BY FRANK SULLIVAN

BESSIE is back on the job, looking as young and sprightly as the day she first came into my life, many years ago. I don't see how she does it. Two weeks back I wouldn't have given three cents for her chances of a comeback. She had had a hard winter and she showed it. She looked seedy. She was dusty. She was functioning on one cylinder, so to speak. Bessie has never spared herself. She has always taken life full on the chin. I hated to have to let her go, but it seemed inevitable. It seemed a shame that through no fault of her own—on the contrary, through an excess of virtues—Bessie should be relegated to Life's Ash Heap so early.

* * *

I didn't want to hurt her and I particularly dreaded the moment when she would find that she had been supplanted by a young Bessie. Finally I decided that before bringing myself to dismiss her it would be no more than fair, in view of the loyalty she had given me, to see if anything could be accomplished by a good rest and rejuvenation. I wanted to give Bessie every chance. (You see, he did! What really happened was that he found he could have my face lifted for $10.50, while a new Bessie would stand him at least sixty bucks. He got me at wholesale for $45.—Bessie.)

* * *

HOW glad I am that I had that thought. Bessie is back from the factory, and the rest and rejuvenation were a complete success. Here she is, tripping along under my fingers as gay as the day I got her. Truly she is the Fanny Ward of typewriters.

Bessie was mine for some time before it dawned on me that she was no ordinary portable. Then I began to realize that writing was becoming easier. Just as I was about to congratulate myself on the incident happened that gave me pause. One day, in the middle of a peculiarly acrobatic piece of prose, I found myself stymied. I needed what the French like to call the mot juste. (Yeah, and what he likes to call the mot juste too. Zut alors.—Bessie.) I was scratching my head in the travail of the creative moment when suddenly there was a clicking of typewriter keys. I looked down (both my hands were on my head, of course) and there, on the paper, was the mot juste I had been seeking. (The mot juste was "swell." —Bessie.)

To say that I was astonished and grateful is to put it mildly. Never before had I had a typewriter which could automatically supply a mot juste. Naturally, Bessie's effect on my prose was immediate, and the easing up of the wear and tear on my scalp due to scratching during the travail of creative moments was fully sixty per cent.

* * *

FROM that day on I grew to depend on Bessie more and more. Two or three mornings a week I wake up with a toothache (Ha!—Bessie), and nothing so impedes creative effort as a throbbing tooth. It used to be agony to write under such a handicap, but Bessie changed all that. All I had to do was put a sheet of paper on the roll, then bang away, and Bessie would transform the result from muddy bilge into the clearest, most limpid prose. I went around feeling like Walter Pater with a toothache.

Later on I worked the thing out so that all I had to do was get out of bed, put three sheets of copy paper in Bessie, get back into bed and say, "All right, Bessie. Whenever you're ready." She would start clicking away for dear life, and in fifteen minutes a magnificent and beautifully typed manuscript would emerge. Unfortunately, she never learned to fold the manuscript, put it in an envelope, address the envelope, stamp it, and mail it to the editor of the March of Events page. It was the only flaw in Bessie.

But I'm glad to have her back, and am thinking seriously of re-christening her Nihon de L'Enclos. (Okay, just so long as nobody gets the idea I had anything to do with writing this piece.—Bessie.)

LETTERS I WOULD LOVE TO MAIL

By J. P. McEVOY

Dorothy Sutton,
South Coast News,
Laguna Beach, Calif.

Dear Dorothy:

IN your delightful column I ran across the following tidbit today. It gave me pause. I quote it, with your gracious permission:

Psychiatrists have learned that lunatics are capable of three kinds of joy. Some have hallucinations of personal grandeur; others are afflicted with euphoria, which is similar to a mild jag; the third group are supposed to have a joyous feeling comparable to that experienced by artists in the presence of a golden sunset.

In case you don't know about it, there is a fourth kind of joy which the lunatics experience. It is the joy that comes from believing the world is getting better and that we are doing something to help speed the day. Some of us take up world peace and disarmament, and do we have the fun! Every time a new budget is announced with a fifty per cent increase in army and navy expenses we laugh merrily.

* * *

TO you it might mean that the nation in question is preparing for another war, but we know there will never be another big war, because all men are brothers and they have learned their lesson; and anyway the world is getting better and better. Because look, how else could you explain Be Kind To Animals Week, Esperanto, Ukrainian Male Choruses and Frank Buck?

Then there are those of us who go in for reforming you less fortunate people. We censor your books and plays and movies, tell you what you can drink, how far apart you can dance, how to enjoy your pleasures without falling into sin. And we tell you what sin is. Because, you see we know, and if it weren't for us who know there would happen to you? You'd have a swell time and finish behind the eight ball.

Of course, we're crazy and you know it. Somtimes, even we suspect it—but what fun we have! Euphoria isn't in it. And we get more thrills out of a red nose than Turner did from a thousand sunsets.

Heretics

OF late we are being
Regaled with Security.
Plans guaranteeing
Unfretted futurity;
Life's to be plotted
With ledger-like clarity.
Each one allotted
His share of prosperity.

All regimented
For Higher Utility.
Wholly contented
In perfect docility;
Thus making way for
The rule of the Better Minds.
We shall be safer
And we can forget our minds!

Won't it be bully?
And yet quite a throng of us
Can't agree fully,
Though doubtless it's wrong of us.
Life, as a scramble,
Perhaps may be terrible.
Yet, with no gamble,
WE'D find it unbearable.

We'll take our chances
And bet on the best of them.
We'll risk romances
And thrill with the rest of them;
Though the fight's bruising
And brick-bats may hammer us.
Winning or losing
The battle is glamorous.

So, bland arrangers
Of Pleasant Utopias,
We'll chance the dangers
Where trouble is copious.
While you dispense your
Dull systems of surety
We crave Adventure—
Pooh! Pooh! for Security!

STUPIDEST THING

More on the Subject of Nazi Germany

By G. K. CHESTERTON

LONDON—I fear I do not always satisfy the scientific precision of those who demand what are exactly the Six Best Saints or the four finest jokes in the world. But I should not like to be thought the sort of man who says he has been in scores of gun-fights when he means he has been in two-and-a-half or claims to know a dozen languages well when he knows about three badly.

So that when I claimed, in my article last week on the stupidest thing of 1933, that there were six mistakes made at once by the militaristic reaction in the Reich, I was not speaking at random, merely because there was no space for the other three. Further than that I will not pursue the political question; nor am I indeed entirely opposed to Hitler's policy, which in some matters has been excellent. I add these paragraphs merely to keep my word with arithmetical exactitude. After the three I named my list would run as follows:

* * *

(4) The stupidest thing on earth is to destroy your own victory. Again and again the Nazis have produced a good effect and then deliberately made it bad and ineffective. When the German Court acquitted the men accused of burning the Reichstag it was universally thought the world of relief and almost of apology. We all felt that the German judiciary at least was still part of civilization, remembering justice and the Roman Law. Then they stopped the whole reaction in their favor by carrying out the sentence in flat contradiction of the verdict, and imprisoning men who were acquitted exactly as if they had been condemned.

They also allowed a crazy Prussian bully, named Goering, to howl threats of private and lawless vengeance on the prisoners "if he got them outside." But Goering was not only bullying the prisoners. He was obviously bullying the judge and the court and the whole German Empire—including Hitler. Otherwise Hitler would kick him out. Such demonstration that power is divided may be logical, accordingto circumstances, in a peaceful democracy. It is death to a dictatorship.

* * *

(5) Where on earth did Hitler pick up the Swastika? Has he been living with Red Indians? And are they Aryans? The thing has cut him off from all the serious culture of the world. The Swastika is most famous as an Asiatic symbol; but what does it symbolize? It is rather a good symbol, and speaks for itself. It means Recurrence; the recognition of sameness; all that is meant by the Wheel of Buddha. In short, it means the opposite of all that is meant by the Nazi revolution. They have brandished it; bizaoned it; done everything except look at it. Whatever the Nazis want they do not want to look like Hindoos.

* * *

(6) The Nazis have done the one thing which is the mark of the eternal or temporary fool. We all tend to do it, because we all occasionally tend to be fools. But historically it is fatal. They have only answered their accusers by praising themselves.

Equalization

THE house painter sings at his labors,
The carpenter whistles and saks;
The ditch-digger laughs with his fellows and chaffs,
For he hasn't time to find flaws.
The stone-mason grins at his helper,
The motorman plays with his bell;
And the track driver's joy is without taint or alloy;
It's a pleasant old world and all's well!

But the merchant scowls on his books,
The broker is surly and cross;
The business man hurries and fusses and worries
As he battles with profit and loss.
The doctor and lawyer are troubled,
While Destiny, weaving her strands,
Puts a burden on brains—that's to offset thei pains
Of the fellow who works with his hands!

LOOKING AT LIFE

Selective Breeding, Prayers and Marital Discord By

ADELA R. ST. JOHNS

SELECTIVE breeding will within a hundred years make all girls pretty enough to pose for magazine covers, according to a Massachusetts professor.

Nice. But relatively unimportant. If selective breeding is going to accomplish anything it better aim at a higher goal than magazine covers. We could do with a few sane, sturdy and courageous young women to meet the progress and change of the next hundred years. Pretty girls are awfully pleasant to look at, but we've expended a lot of energy and thought upon looks in the past ten years, and it wouldn't do us any harm to increase our sense of values quite a good deal. The majority of women nowadays are good-looking. The physical culturist, the beauty expert and the dressmaker have taken care of that. Unless all the signs are wrong we'll need more than that to cope with the condition we have created if the movies—freedom and equality in a world for many centuries controlled by men.

* * *

PRAYERS for rain, offered by hundreds of farmers in the drought-ridden States, were followed by a torrential downpour.

Some prayers are answered. Others aren't. The bridge between the prayer and its fulfillment is probably faith.

It was Carlyle, I think, who said, "Prayer is and remains the native and deepest impulse of the soul of man."

Somewhere there is a story about a soldier in the Civil War who was severely wounded in battle. The army chaplain said to him, "Do you ever pray?" The soldier looked up from his cot of pain and said, "Sometimes. I prayed the other night during that battle, I guess everybody prayed then."

Those desperate prayers, which come in certain hours from almost every heart, are not always answered. Sometimes—are results rather than causes.

There are few actual acts which cannot be forgiven in marriage. We have all seen men and women forgive each other everything, from murder to trumped aces.

But when two people have different ideals in life, when happiness wears a different guise for each of them, when they meet life from a different standpoint, it's nearly always hopeless.

You have got to play in the same key if you want harmony. If you play in the same key it doesn't matter what variations, what chords you use. But if the fundamentals are in F sharp on one side and B flat on the other you're sunk.

Morning Thoughts

THERE are the things I live to see:
A stretch of beach, a budding tree.
Sparrows upon my window-pane,
Lilacs drenched in the tumbling rain.

These things I could be without:
Electric storms, a touch of gout.
Nosey neighbors in our flat,
Faded flowers on last year's hat.

ALLOW ME TO SAY

Contract Bridge and Candles in a Great Mansion By

CHARLES H. TOWNE

THERE is an enormous house of great beauty in New York filled with art treasures and every conceivable thing to make the heart glad. Friends of the owner crave invitations to its stately grilled portals, and everyone comes away not a little awed by the perfect surroundings.

A friend of mine was invited to dine and play bridge there the other evening. The gold plate was on display, and there was, even in these harsh times, a footman behind practically every chair.

Later four of the most avid contract-players were shown to a cardroom, and were about to enjoy what Charles Lamb calls the rigor of the game when an organist was heard rendering selections from Wagner. They waited, in the midst of their first deal listening with rapt attention to the strains of Parsifal, but secretly hoping that the music would soon cease. For they were the kind of players who wince at interruptions, no matter how lovely. Finally, realizing that there was to be no curtailment of Wagner they proceeded with the cards, and though they had discreetly closed the door that led into the music-room they found themselves leaning forward, from time to time, fairly shrieking at one another, "Four hearts!" or "One no-trump!" or even "A little slam in spades, partner!"

* * *

TO this same mansion a great neurologist was recently summoned. Flunkies in livery were all about. The house was literally sprinkled with them, and the neurologist, feeling sure the case was not serious, and that he would never have to be summoned again, asked a certain plum-colored servant to show him about. He noticed that every room was lighted only with candles — massive ecclesiastical candles even larger than one sees in a cathedral. They were everywhere—in the velvet hangings of the chandeliers over the bookcases, on oak tables—and there were no electric buttons to be seen.

As the servant politely took him to the floor the neurologist, being of an inquiring turn of mind, asked: "And what, my man, is your position in this house?" Whereupon the bewigged and finely accoutred fellow replied: "Oh, sir, I'm just the second candleman."

SHAKE hands with a millionaire. Here I am with a million rabbits and still I'm not happy. It's getting so I walk with a little hop and I have the velvet brown eye. Nobody invites me out to dinner any more because they just say I nibble at the salad. People get laughing at the way the tip of my nose twitches and then my big brown eyes fill with tears. Even the state department of agriculture can't console me. But when I get home again I sit up on my haunches and they all gather round and sit up, too, and it's like old times when we didn't have no wolves and foxes to bother us and a man could be happy with his own little family. I couldn't pay for this week's carload of lettuce, so maybe this is the last time we'll all be together. They're going to attach old Uncle Tom and five hundred of his children and sell 'em down the river. I can't stand it. I think I'll take the other young ones out arbutus hunting that day so they won't have to see Tom and the kids go. I'll just tell them he's out on a toot and his kids are looking for him. That won't seem so strange to them.

VAGABONDIA

Five Remarks, Mostly About Los Angeles

By BRUNO LESSING

LOS ANGELES.—Went to the Knickerbocker Hotel in Hollywood and began to unpack. Got a telephone message from Joe Willicombe that Mr. Hearst wanted me to come up to the ranch. So I repacked. I have just two hours in this hotel. So I want to make a few remarks.

* * *

REMARK No. 1.—Joe said I was to take a taxi to the flying field, where I would find a plane to take me to the ranch. What I said is not printable. I do not take airplanes. I have the greatest respect for them and I think that this young generation that is growing up will fly as readily as I step into an old horse-drawn cab. Then Joe said, "You're just a coward." And I said, "I am." What could be fairer? I'd rather meet Dillinger face to face than drop off the roof of a ten-foot shack. No use telling me that the airplane is not going to drop. I'm just scared stiff by the thought of going up.

* * *

REMARK No. 2.—Packing and repacking. It's the bane of travelling. When you have to travel as I do with a typewriter and a lot of paper and envelopes and dictionaries and books of reference, in addition to the ordinary baggage of a man who changes his shirt once in a while, this packing business gets you coo-coo. Especially when your memory is unreliable and you don't remember where you put things. Only yesterday I rumbled up two suit-cases looking for a blue necktie. The one object that kept bobbing up was a little bottle of headache tablets. Today I met a friend who said he had a headache. I spent fifteen minutes rumpling up the bags again—and discovered half a dozen blue neckties—before I found one bottle of those tablets.

Somewhere or other I have a dozen bottles of fountain pen ink. Whenever I look for one I cannot find it, so I buy another. Today my fountain pen is empty and I don't know where any of those bottles is—or are.

* * *

REMARK No. 3.—When you ride from the Atlantic coast across the continent for the purpose of arriving at Los Angeles you naturally expect a joyful reaction upon reaching your destination. Here's what I had:

Two thousand nine hundred and eighty-seven filling stations. Two hundred and sixty-eight heaps of tin cans. Billboards. "Smith's Swell Laundry." "Eat at Joe's." "Sam Sells Swell Shoes." "Prepare to Meet Thy God!" "Bulwinkle's Furniture on the Installment Plan." Too many to count.

Back yards overgrown with weeds. Automobile cemeteries with broken-down cars for sale at fifty cents apiece. The wash-lines of 500 families. Hot-dog stands.

A repellent and depressing approach. Why not make it all pleasant and cheerful? Here and there you get a glimpse of a pleasing coloring and of stately palms that indicate what this region has in store for you. Why doesn't Los Angeles organize its approach and reward you for your long trip with an artistic embrace?

The "Chief"—one of the finest railroad trains in the world—takes you in great comfort from Chicago and lands you in a fine freight car.

* * *

REMARK No. 4.—With only five hours to spend in Los Angeles there is hardly time to renew old contacts, to say nothing of wandering about in search of new impressions. Last year I came over from Paris and Los Angeles seemed cheerful because Paris was under cull when I left. Now I've come over from Rome and Los Angeles seems quiet. Because Rome is almost the noisiest city in the world. As I don't imagine that Los Angeles has changed much in a year I've come to the conclusion that casual impressions are apt to be blah.

* * *

REMARK No. 5.—I think Los Angeles ought to have a reception committee to meet all travelers who have crossed the continent. From an architectural or historical or spiritual or cultural standpoint I don't think Los Angeles is so hot. But it contains more nice people and interesting people and good-looking people than any other place I've ever struck. As a city I like San Francisco better. It also has many nice people but not so many as Los. which is a bigger place. On the other hand, San Francisco hasn't as many varieties of cranks, nuts, fanatics and "ists" as Los.

When I arrived in Los Angeles today I met Louis B. Mayer, the film rajah, who has come down to meet some passengers. Now Louis is all right and a good friend of mine, but he suggests business and not the gladness of life of which Los Angeles boasts. What I'm suggesting is a committee of stars, young and old, witty and cheerful smiles, who would put wreaths of flowers around your neck as they do in Honolulu. Believe me, this is a great idea. If I were met like that I'd arrive every day.

Tall Man's Burden

SOME motor cars are custom built
I've seen a few of these;
I've never seen a rumble seat
With room enough for knees.
I've ridden lots of rumble seats
And I've been cramped, I swear,
And I believe they should allow
For some knee action there.

Apparently Albert had two women friends, both widows, who wrote to him, and to whom he wrote. One of them, in a letter sometime ago, asked Albert pointedly what he was doing. Albert wrote back that he was sticking around here at Lamar, "waiting for things to open up."

Carnera-Baer Bout ↕ So Poor the Colonel
To Go on Schedule ↓ Picks Him to Win

By DAVE EGAN
Pinch-Hitting for Austen Lake

(A radio announcer conducts a sports column)

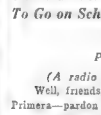
Well, friends, Max Baer, the Butchermore Liver, and Cremo Primera—pardon me, friends of the air, just a minute, please—

Max Baer, the Livermore Butcher, and Primo Carnera will play for the Davis Bakery Cup Cake championship of the world—that is, I mean to say, in a 15-inning contest—



Dave Egan
Get it? Ha, ha, ha!

Oh, yes, now I have it, friends, they are to engage in a boxing cawntest next Chewsday evening. I mean Thursday, at the Garren's stupendous, colossal, enormous, superspecial Goldfish Bowl in Long Island City.

My fan mail has been positively terrific in recent weeks awaking me to render my expert opinion on the result of the cawntest between these bruisers—I might almost say primitive men, giants just a step removed from the Stone Age.

Well, of course, Carnera can't fight Baer.

Carnera seems to be a decent sort of a chap, kind to animals and all that sort of thing, and the scenery at Pompton Lakes is simply gorgeous. The trees troop down to the water's edge in green files, under the bluest of blue heavens, and all is peace and tranquility in the rustic quiet and simplicity of the country si . . .

Simply a Build-up for the Box Office

For better or for worse, the Battle of the Bankrupts will be staged next Thursday night.

From this particular corner, which is almost as close to the fight as some of the cash customers will get, the boys were trying to fenagle a way in which they could postpone the bout for a week, until the ticket sale began to breathe and live.

The Garden booted one like a Brooklyn infielder when it protested the Ross-McLarnin welterweight battle less than two weeks ago. A great number of pesos and mega escaped with the moths from the pockets of the clients.

They are not quite ready to give up again, not just yet.

They would like to ponder the matter judiciously, for a moment or two.

The story is this: the Garden wanted a week's postponement. In order that the clents might become sufficiently warmed up over the matter to purchase a ticket.

Now Mr. J. Dempsey was always an obliging soul, ready to do anything to help the promoters, and since he is some minor percentage of the Baer management, a week's postponement was requested, "in order that Baer might reach better condition."

Well, Commissioner Brown went up to view the eminent actor, Mr. Baer, and Baer indulged in some of his finest histrionics. He wanted to prove that he was not in condition, and he proved it so thoroughly that Commissioner Brown went away from there firmly convinced that as a fighter, he was a wart, a toad, a hedge-hog, and a ninny.

* * *

Commissioner Brown Goes for It

They sold the idea so thoroughly that the commissioner, waving his tonsils aloft, was all for postponing the fight forever. The poor man apparently fails to realize the dodges of this boxing racket, the crosses and double-crosses, the connivings and cross-connivings.

Why, in my day (pardon me while I throw my flowing whiskers back over my right shoulder)—in my day and time, we usually got more enjoyment observing the fenagling and skullduggery and scheming which went on in advance of a bout than we did in the bout itself.

There be juggling' around these fight camps and in this fight game, and this was just another little bit of jugglin' in the interest of the box-office.

* * *

Br'er Baer, however, was found hale and hearty, as well he should be, and may your courageous commentator go right out on the end of the limb with him.

Br'er Baer, the Livermore Butcher, is going to knock Carnera deader than yesterday's paper.

Moral support was tendered today by Bobby Goldman, one of the best judges of boxing in these here parts, who also believes in Baer. So if Carnera should win and you should hear a loud splash in the Frog Pond late next Thursday night, don't be alarmed.

It will simply be the Messrs Egan and Goldman taking off for kingdom come.

* * *

If I recall correctly, and I do recall correctly, Herr Max Schmeling was an odds-on favorite to beat several types of tripe out of the same Br'er Baer when they fought in the same Garden Bowl last year, but Schmeling did well to escape with his life.

The experts at the training camps were unanimous in stating, politely of course, that he was a tramp of the lowest class, simply because Max is not a gymnasium fighter.

Neither was Mickey Walker, but he could fight his way out of a cellophone wrapper on occasion.

Nather was Harry Greb, but he thought nothing of battling and bashing his way through a puff of smoke.

And furthermore, there are about three "experts" in the country who know a fighter when they see one.

* * *

The daffydills are at it again today.

The best of them, if they lived that long, came off the dirt tracks—immortals like Oldfield, DeFalma, Chevalier, Carey, Frame, Cummings and Maurie Rose.

Many others came off, too—but feet first.

Odds Tighten on Carnera

New York, June 9—A surprising change in the betting odds on Primo Carnera today shortened the price on the champion from 3 to 5 to 5 to 6 as he tapered off in training at Asbury Park for the defense of his heavyweight championship against Max Baer here on Thursday night.

The change in the odds was surprising, in view of the fact that Broadway gossip has a soft touch for the champion. The so-called "wise money" apparently has decided that Baer is just playing possum.

The report from the doctors who examined both Carnera and Baer has strengthened this opinion. Physicians declared both men in splendid condition for the fight, but differing in part runners that Baer has not reached top condition.

Advance sale on the fight was rolling along steadily today after a temporary slump caused by reports of Baer's lack of proper conditioning. The advance gate today moved to $268,950. There was $158,000 also of this in cash on hand, while some $77,000 in reservations had been recorded.

With this advance, there appeared a chance that the gate would top the half million dollar mark, provided last minute enthusiasm for the fight could be aroused among the customers.

JUST 4 ROUNDS IS BAER'S VIEW OF BATTLE

By Hype Igoe

Asbury Park, N. J, June 9—Max Baer laughed himself to sleep over his "steaming" of big Primo Carnera at the boxing commissioner's. I rode with him down to his camp after he had a shave and a hair cut at the Park Seniral. He was in a happy mood.

His manhood and youth had been fine-combed by three inquisitive doctors, and they had found him better off physically and mentally than the day he knocked out Schmeling.

Max talked half the way to Asbury Park about his pulling the pin feathers of Signor Carnera's massive chest.

I'll be coming.

I was sitting with Jack Dempsey on the brass window sill of the board meeting room when the two stripped to the waist.

Both of us saw Baer edging up to Dempsey, and both said: "Here comes the business."

Were they magnificent?

I've never seen anything like them in human flesh since the day Jeffries came down from the California mountain to fight Bob Fitzsimmons in San Francisco, or that afternoon at Toledo when Dempsey walking by my side on the sands of . aumee Bay, suddenly said:

"Hype, I've got to slap this Willard down for you, haven't I? You've picked me in four rounds, and that's my guess. Four, I'll have to slap him down for you."

"CINCH TO LICK"

Seated in the biz F Hol Sun's mansion of half a hundred or more rooms, his "cottage by the sea," Max talked his little fur piece, using stunt at the commissioner's.

"I can get that guy's goat any time I meet him. Did you notice he didn't open his trap? He's afraid to open it for fear I'll drive a horse and buggy into it.

"Did you see him stare up and want to take a sock at me when I pulled his chest mane? Can't take a joke, can't take one on how. That's why he's going to be a cinch to whip. Just can't take a joke, and I'll kid the pants off him when I get him in there.

"His dragon's teeth and his great heart scare me. I used to handle cattle for market, got up at 4 in the morning to do it when I was 14, and all the Carneras fowls in the world won't catch up with those croooners of my boyhood days.

"I worked hard, early and late. Is it any wonder I'm like a lamb, a little fun now that I am away from all that?

"I have my own particular way of training, Hype, and that's why I was surprised that an experienced man like Brown should order me to fight my sparring partner. I haven't got them in there, for that purpose. Everything I do, I do for a reason, and I'm perfectly satisfied with my conditions. I have worked hard, faithfully, with never a slip.

"Why, I wouldn't dream of slighting that which is going to make me champion. When we match condition and stamina in here Thursday night, you and all the world will know which is the greatest and which is cock of the walk.

"I know the guy can't fight. I've seen enough of him to know all about him. I'll feint him into the alss of phantom and then knock him down. Did you notice that I was as tall as he is, and when I put on his coat it pinched my shoulders. How big? What an. I, a string of fish?"

Borotra, Brugnon Give France Lead

Para, June 9 (AP)—Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, veteran French doubles players, today, showed their years still rested lightly on them, as they walloped Baron Gelfried Von Cramm and Hans Denker 8—7, 6—4, 10—8, to give France a 2—1 lead in matches over Germany in their Davis Cup series.

Von Cramm, star of the German team was the outstandingr player on the courts, but he got little aid from his young partner and his brilliance could not offset the steadiness of the French veterans.

Endeavour Victor in Yacht Cup Trial

Southend, Eng., June 9 (AP)—Endeavour today won her second straight race in the trials arranged for the America's Cup challengers, coming two minutes by a false start and then outsailing the fleet to come home 12 minutes ahead of the second boat, Astra.

Her time for the 40 miles in light airs was 4 hours 33 minutes 56 seconds. The race was the closest approximation made in the trials to ideal cup conditions. T O M. Sopwith appeared highly pleased with his craft's performance.

Dorothy Hunter 4-Ball Winner

Dorothy Hunter, unsuccessful semifinalist in the women's state golf championship at Winchester C. C., entered the special mixed foursball event at the same club, and paired with Arthur Rogers won it.

The young Trapelo couple put together a 71 on an alternate stroke two-ball basis and led a field of 26 team by two strokes.

Mrs. Henri F. Prunaret of Charles River and Bill Spears of Winchester were second with 73.

Gene Sarazen, stocky P G A champion, took the lead today by a one-stroke margin from Bobby Cruickshank of Richmond, Va., at the end of 54 holes of the United States open golf championship

Sarazen tallied a third round 73 for a total of 218 while Cruickshank's aggregate was 219 after a poor 77.

Wiffy Cox of Brooklyn shot a third round 74, giving him an aggregate of 220 and assured at least a three-way tie for third place with little already lost by youthful John[illegible] Goodman, Omaha amateur, who had a fine 72 for the 54-hole total of 2.6.

Nevertheless, Gene's sudden wavering on the late holes came as something of a shock. He had 5 at the 13th and 16th when he should have had 4. He got a par 5 on the tough 17th and seemed to have righted himself for another dash toward the tape, for he hit a fine tee shot over the brow of the hill into the middle of the 18th fairway. He outdrove Horton Smith, who finally took a 79 for 220, by 15 yards here.

Baseball Tips—No. 3

By Austen Lake

FIRST BASEMAN'S STRETCH

Major league umpires, in judging close plays at first base, watch for the base-runner's foot to hit the bag while listening for the sound of the ball smacking into the baseman's mitt, combining their eyes and ears to make the decision. Knowing this major league first basemen, like Ed Morgan of the Red Sox and Buck Jordan of the Braves, stretch as far as they can to meet the throw on close plays (see drawing). In this way they shorten the flight of the ball by six or more feet and cause it to hit their glove a split second quicker than would be the case if they stood upright on the bag.

Life of Max Baer

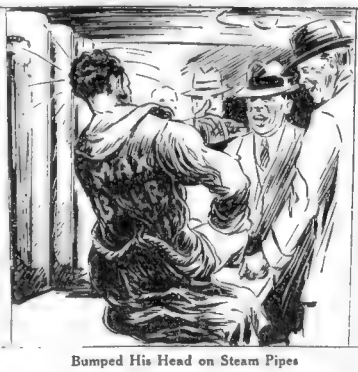
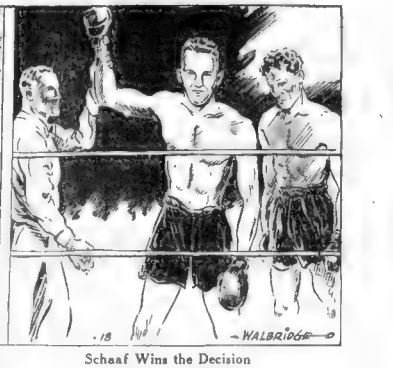
Hoffman, Lorimer Co-Manage Baer

The First Trip to New York



Bumped His Head on Steam Pipes



Schaaf Wins the Decision

Shortly after the death of Frankie Campbell, Ham Lorimer sold one-half his share of Baer's contract to Ancil Hoffman. All were pals then. They were to see more of one another in long suits over accounting and litigation over managership of the fighter.

Baer, meanwhile, had taken a holiday in Reno. There he met for the first time Mrs. Dorothy Dunbar Wells, a New York actress. They became sweethearts. When Mrs. Wells returned to New York, Baer demanded Lorimer and Hoffman get him fights in New York city. He wanted to be near Dorothy.

With Baer barred in California one year, the new board of strategy complied with Baer's wishes. Jimmy Braddock had been originally selected as Baer's first opponent, but the New York Boxing Commission refused to sanction the match. They said Baer was too tough. Ernie Schaaf and Tommy Loughran were the next choices. The management decided on Schaaf, later to take the role as buffer to Jack Sharkey's title.

In his dressing room under the gallery seats at Madison Square Garden, Baer nervously awaited windup of preliminaries. Several newspapermen and Mickey Walker were in the dressing room. Baer kept up a constant nervous chatter. The gossip turned to how tough Baer could be.

"Here, I'll show you!"

Baer demonstrated. He butted his head against the steam pipes on the wall of the low dressing room. The gathering couldn't decide if he was tough or loony.

As they came into the ring Baer scanned the audience. Dorothy, his sweetheart, was not in the audience. Max was disappointed. He made a sluggish battle and although his seconds pulled him out of a trance for a fast finish, the decision went to Ernie Schaaf.

Likes Camera to Win

I ASKED ALEX who he liked in the Camera-Baer bout.

"I think Camera will win," replied Alex. "I brought Camera to Boston for his bout with Jim Maloney at the Garden. Maloney won the decision, but Camera proved he had great ring possibilities.

"That fight did Primo a great deal of good. At the time he was under a cloud, and the charge was even made that Malone was going to take a dive for him. The fellow proved he could fight, and he came on to win the championship.

"Camera, unlike most big men, is exceptionally fast. He has a first-class left hand, while his right is dangerous when he lets it come over."

Ed George Picks Baer

"I saw Baer box several times in California," said George, "and I was also at the ringside the night Max knocked out Schmeling in New York. Baer is a natural puncher and is tireless when in the ring.

"I do not take all this talk about Baer's poor condition seriously. He has been at Asbury Park, N. J., for a month, and this is all the time he needs for training. No boxer or wrestler can work hard at a training camp for more than a month without going stale.

"I think you will find Baer in good condition when he breezes into Garden Monday night. And it is my opinion he will be champion of the world when he leaves the ring."

Miss Vahey Regains Golf Crown, Beating Miss Douglas at 19th

Miss Douglas fought a gallant uphill battle. Three down at the [illegible] 7, she won the next two holes, to finish only one hole behind at the turn.

She lost the 10th, but got this back at the 13th and squared the match with a great exhibition at the 15th.

POWERFUL DRIVING

At the 15th and 16th holes, Miss Vahey played irons shot that few of the low handicap men golfers could duplicate. She was on the left of the 15th fairway from the tee, elected to play a long low pulled iron to the green, one of the most difficult shots in the box. The shot came off perfectly and she was just on the front edge of the green, with Miss Douglas five yards short with a drive and a fine [illegible].

A sliced drive off the 16th tee set the stage for Miss Vahey to pull off the most remarkable shot of the round. Her ball was in among the small pines and almost directly [illegible] and was also stymied by the tree on the brow of the hill. Miss Vahey played high [illegible]shie. Her ball tore through the branches of one of the pines and [illegible] the top of the big tree, but the mound at the left of the green and kicked towards he putting surface.

Going to the 18th hole, Miss Douglas was one down. They both connected with fine drives and perfect second to be just short of the green. Miss Douglas was away and her chipped ran about [illegible] feet beyond the pin, while Miss Vahey was some twelve feet from it to the left.

It was a case of sink that putt or lose her chance for the title. After much careful deliberation and study of the line of her putt, Miss Douglas dropped the putt and the match was square, when Miss Vahey missed.

Off they went up the 19th fairway, where Miss Vahey again outdrove her opponent this time by about 20 yards. Miss Douglas played a high spoon shot to the green and from down below it appeared as though she was on. Believing that her opponent was home, Miss Vahey played a No. 4 iron smack on the green and the ball stopped about 10 feet short of the cup. Then it was discovered that Miss Douglas was over the green from where she chipped back a trifle strong. Miss Vahey's approaches putt partially stymied Miss Douglas. The latter's putt was the match going but Miss Vahey's ball and the match was all over and Roasmond "pinkie" Vahey had come back into her own, regaining title she lost to Mrs. Baker, Jr., at Andover two years ago.

JORDAN MARSH MOVES NEARER MITTON CUP

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Jordan Marsh 5, Hovey's 1
Wm. Filene Sons & Co. 5, Stewart's 0
Gilchrist 6, Sears Roebuck 2½

By Bill Grimes

By virtue of a 5-1 victory over C. F. Hovey Co. at Charles River Country Club, Jordan Marsh Co. today was four points nearer the Retail Stores League championship and the coveted Mitton Cup.

Although Jordan has played one more match than Conrad & Co. and the Wm. Filene Sons & Co., the seven-point lead acquired during the two matches will prove a difficult handicap for either the second or third place teams to overcome.

Filene and Conrad will play off their postponed match next Friday, during the Retail Stores' annual tournament at the South Shore Country Club, and although the former has the call on paper, Captain George Saxe and his charges will meet with some stiff opposition from Dave Moeser, Lee Ehrlich and the Wagner brothers, Wally and Herb.

R. H. White Co. is rapidly becoming a threat. White dropped both points in the opening match of the season at Woodland but edged out their opponents by one point on the next three matches, and yesterday hung a 5 to 1 defeat on the Shepard Stores, the defending champions.

With Herb Kelley and Fred Crawford taking three points from Harris and Measitt, and Edmund O'Connell and Paul Carver yielding only one point to Summers and Brebbaut, Slattery & Co. moved up in the standing at the expense of Chandler & Co., while Gilchrist beat Sears, Roebuck 3½ to 2½.

The annual tournament of the Retail Stores League will be staged at South Shore Country Club next Friday at that time, the two postponed team matches, Filene's vs. Conrad's and Slattery's vs. Gilchrist will be played off.

MAID OF MAR IS CHOICE IN FIRST RACE

advantage over Canterbury, Golden Dream and other fast juveniles.

Prior to that effort Allen Z handed Chesa a drubbing. The latter is one of the most consistent youngsters of the season. [illegible]

ALLEN Z, DASHER, EVANGELIST

FIRST RACE—$1000 conditions two-year-olds [illegible] Lewis [illegible] Allen Z [illegible] Evangelist [illegible]

ALLEN Z should make every pace of this event a winning one. Contention, if any, should come from DASHER. The latter trimmed a fair field in his last and [illegible] EVANGELIST's last race was too poor to be true. He is capable of better things.

MAID OF MARS, HEATHER, FIVE O'CLOCK

SECOND RACE [illegible]

MAID OF MARS [illegible] in this limited [illegible] event. In her last start at Belmont Park she paced [illegible] the speedy Irish Biller, Bagatelle, Spur and other good ones were behind her in that effort. HEATHER is a fair sort of lepper and [illegible] credited some sort of a chance. Most of the Belmont races were creditable. FIVE O'CLOCK [illegible] improve. He was a mighty nice [illegible] last season.

CHESHIRE, JESSIE D. M., GLISTENING

THIRD RACE $900, claiming, two-year-olds [illegible] furlongs (7), Kindred Spirit [illegible] Jessie D. M. 114 [illegible]

Cheshire appears to have been well placed. [illegible] more than [illegible] JESSIE D. M [illegible] GLISTENING [illegible]

HALCYON, OKAPI, SLAPDASH

FIFTH RACE $1200 added, Carter [illegible] three-year-olds and up, six and one-half furlongs (7), [illegible] 105, On Range 95, War Stripes 104, Okapi 115, Bright Haven 97, Halcyon 109, Slapdash 100.

I have a hunch that HALCYON may [illegible] and down the highly fancied OKAPI. The Whitney flyer was heavily backed [illegible] he propped at the start [illegible] effort. Prior to that race, the Broomstick colt pulled up to Good Advice and other topnotchers in a seven furlong sprint. OKAPI has been freshened up since his Toboggan triumph and he may need the race. Last fall in Maryland he was unable to [illegible] the top one. SLAPDASH received a tightner a few days ago. With that race under her belt, she may prove dangerous.

SUNADOR, COLLATERAL, CARRY OVER

FIFTH RACE [illegible] Anarchy 11[illegible]

Throw out SAUNDOR'S last race and he looks all over the winner of this mile race. A slow start ruined his chances in that effort. Prior to that effort the Sir Gallahad colt had easily defeated Pericles. COLLATERAL'S recent efforts have been very [illegible] but the work [illegible] suggests that he is capable of better things. On [illegible] form he would be dangerous. CARRY OVER looks as good as anything else for the minor award. The Wheatley stables colt looked like a real nice racer during the early stages of the New York season but his recent efforts have been only fair.

POMPONIUS, JAMISON, MAJOR GENERAL

SIXTH RACE [illegible] one mile and [illegible] Major General 108, Pomponius 116.

The mile and one-eighth of this affair will be right down POMPONIUS' alley. The Coe colt has been running over top of horses in recent efforts at a mile. JAMISON finished close up to the top one in their last meeting, and he must be scored the next best figures. MAJOR GENERAL is moving up but his recent efforts have been good.

[illegible] pounds apprentice allowance claimed.

Greetings, Junior Birdmen! Messages from many members have been received at national headquarters congratulating William Ratcliffe, the winner of our national motto contest, upon his prize winning entry, and "Bill," as he is known to his friends, asked Lawrence Shaw, national director, to send his thanks to all.

He says he looks forward to his 15-day grand tour of the country, from coast to coast, and hopes to meet many members on his trip.

Four Are Tied On Motto Entries

The final results were nine votes for "Today's Pilot of Models—Tomorrow's Model P[illegible]" Two votes for "Birdmen Today Eagles Tomorrow"—and one vote for "Make America Airminded," and so the winning laurels went to young William Ratcliffe of New York, and his motto became our motto!

The judges did not know the names of the contestants, who included four from New England winners in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser Wing. The judges received the motto entries only and based their selections on them.

FIRST NATIONAL STORES PROFIT INCREASES

Good Showing Is Made Despite Many New Kinds of Taxes

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

First National Stores Inc. pamphlet report issued today shows an increase in net profit of $174,731 for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1934 over that of the previous year. As chairman of the board Augustus F. Goodwin points out this showing was accomplished despite the imposition of many different kinds of taxes. In fact next to wages taxes are the largest individual item of expense. The writer feels it is safe to assume that had it not been for the distinct upward trend of taxes, First National Stores would not only have bettered the showing of $4.97 earned per share of common stock, but would have undoubtedly been able to distribute food products to consumers at lower price levels.

* * *

Notes: To get a better idea of the taxes paid by the First National Stores one only needs to break down the tax figure in terms of dollars per share . . . It amounts to $1.60 per common share . . . Total sales of foodstuffs for the year ending March 1934 amounted to $195,812,721, an increase of 5 per cent over the previous like period . . . Of this gross figure taxes took nearly one and one quarter per cent . . . When the average man realizes that 37 per cent average living costs are for food he may well wonder whether increasing taxes on necessities are not lowering his standard of living.

* * *

The stock market started moving in an upward direction in a determined manner as the week drew to a close. After several sessions in which the wisdom of our hypothetical long position was in doubt prices jumped ahead in a fashion that spoke volumes for the worth of the technical position and testified to a real scarcity of stocks. However, we will not assume that a trend in the direction we favor warrants buying on strength. A dip early next week would be a logical development and we suggest waiting for it if purchases have not been made.

* * *

Briefs: A turndown into the 95-97 area is what we look for . . . A long list of stocks have righted themselves from a tape and chart standpoint . . . Even Sears Roebuck and Air Reduction look better . . . And these were two spots which caused us much concern . . . Union Pacific and Union Carbide look as though they were well taken, and they, too, have reversed recent bearish tendencies . . . The steel group acts as though it had never heard of a strike threat.

* * *

For the sake of review we will again note the list of stocks to which attention was directed a week ago by the writer. Atchison, DuPont, Western Union, Westinghouse, Johns Manville, New York Central, United Aircraft, Air Reduction and Douglas. The emphasis was on the first four named, with the last as an alternative purchase. Besides these special reviews on American Sugar, United Fruit and Texas Corporation were given over a longer period.

* * *

This And That: By groups we are sold to favor oil, sugar and dairy shares . . . Steels look much better and long positions are under consideration in some quarters . . . Vanadium between 20-21, Bethlehem between 32-34, U. S. Steel between 42-43 look attractive . . . For a low-priced issue we still regard Molybdenum, under 8 on the curb, as our particular favorite . . . Utah Metal on the Boston board is doing nicely.

Big Changes Are Expected in Rail Transportation

By International News Service

New York, June 9—We are on the verge of rather radical changes in the mechanics of rail transportation, in the words of Joseph B Eastman, who, after years of experience as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and now as federal coordinator of railroads, probably is more familiar with the problems of the carriers than any other individual.

"The prospects for important improvements in railroad operation, equipment, service and charges are excellent," he holds.

"And to attain the objective of improvement and modernization of railroad operation, he suggests as one important step the "thorough study of the possibilities of lightweight equipment of new type in both passenger and freight service."

But already the railroads have seen the handwriting on the wall and fully appreciating the vital transition in the field of transportation are making the most determined drive in history to strengthen and enhance their dominant position.

Depleted treasures arising from the long depression necessarily have retarded adoption of new and more efficient types of rail equipment but already huge strides have been made in improving the efficiency of motive power and cars, and the return of more normal earning power is certain to witness st modernization programs and the expenditure of huge sums for rolling stock.

Any further encroachment by other transportation agencies on the passenger business of the railroads will be averted if the carriers can prevent it and no longer is the attitude of rail chiefs one of indifference to changes in transportation methods.

Rather adopting the best principles developed in the airplane and automobile industries, the railroads are already constructing equipment of advanced design, of a type to arouse the publics interest, and at the same time provide a service never before offered by the carriers.

Both the Union Pacific and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy have had built, new trains of lightweight material, powered with internal combustion engines, and capable of running speeds of 90 miles an hour, and top speeds of well over 100 miles an hour.

MUCH GOOD IS COMING OUT OF NEW DEAL

It's Important to Point Out Its Errors, Is Haney Opinion

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, June 9—Eventualy, much good is going to develop out of the new deal.

My position is that the thing as a whole is very bad, and that it is important to point out its errors. I am in almost complete disagreement with its philosophy, and I consider its economics—if it has any—to be unreal and unsound.

But out of it are going to come highly desirable corrections of the old deal; and when in time we recover from the revolutionary excesses, bureaucracy, regimentation, and monetary juggling, our economic life will be better. (I can see no improvement in our politics, however.)

The outstanding improvements may be summed up as follows:

1. The basis for fairer competition is being developed. There is considerable truth in regarding competition as a sort of game, which may be made better by regulation and rules. Wise rules may be imposed, which, if not too much out of line with human nature and social customs, can be enforced. These may set standards as to who shall compete, and how they shall compete.

Out of the ordeal of the new deal, there is coming a more definite conception of minimum limits, below which we can say that it is not desirable that competition should occur. For example, it may be possible to determine that any competition which leads to the existence of wages and working conditions which do not allow a decent standard of living, is socially undesirable—is not worth while. This is the "sense" in the idea of wage minima.

Incidentally, of course, this idea raises questions about what to do with laborers who can't earn the desired minimum. It leads also to the problem of dealing with industries or companies which can't make profits while paying the minimum wage. (This is where the new deal falls down.)

Business methods in seeking sales, quoting prices, and determining costs, are also an important part of fair competition. Here, too, we may hope for improvement under the new deal, following lines already laid down.

If we will just stick to the idea of making economic life as safe and worthwhile as can be for the individual, the eventual collapse of the new deal will leave competition a more constructive force than it has been.

(2) Financial and corporate conditions are undergoing some real reforms, many of which will stick and do good.

Once banks regain their independence, we will find them sounder and their functions much clarified. The abuse of credit for speculative and manipulative purposes will be more difficult. These developments are to the good.

Some good work has been done in narrowing down the field for speculative gambling and burglarious financial "manipulation." While the securities act and the Stock Exchange act may require revision, I think that under wise administration they will do great good.

STOCKS STEADY AT CLOSE OF TRADING

New York, June 9—The stock market continued its rise today but ran into heavy profit-taking near the close as a result of yesterday's spectacular bulge. The closing tone was steady.

This checked the advance but recessions were only fractional and the market displayed a strong undertone.

A factor was the attack of steel labor on Gen. Johnson's plan to settle the threatened strike. Offsetting this was spectacular strength in grains, with wheat soaring more than 4 cents a bushel on the sensational government crop report.

Commodities were generally strong, aided by the jump in grains and the advance in stocks. Cotton rose 75 cents a bale to the highest level since early April. Bonds were higher in sympathy with the strength in other markets. The dollar was steady.

Stocks started off with a rush in the heaviest opening in several months. Initial blocks ran to 4000 shares in General Electric.

Gains ran to more than a point and were most pronounced in the rails and tobaccos. Allied Chemical later spurted more than 3 points.

Steels and motors were heavily bought, particularly General Motors, but were able to score only fractional advances, and receded from their best prices later. Sugars were stimulated by the rise in American Sugar to a new high on the move. The mining shares were easier, but the rest of the list was firm.

Moderate gains ruled in the first hour although the list turned irregular near the end of the period. Trading was at about the same pace as in yesterday's first period. Chemical shares continued in demand with Allied recording a gain of better than 2 points.

U. S. Steel was steady around its previous closing level. Electric Storage Battery was 2 points above its last closing price. Continental Can showed a gain of almost 2 points. American Tobacco advanced slightly more than a point.

Rail issues were generally firm with Union Pacific and Nickel Plate recording gains of around a point. Underwood Elliot & Fisher was better than a point higher. Gains of moderate proportion were recorded by Atlas Powder, Auburn, Case, Threshing, Caterpillar Tractor, National Steel and Mesta Machine.

Sales to 11 a. m. aproximated 410,000 shares.

Overnight consideration of the President's message to Congress found the financial district inclined to approve the greater part of it. The executive's disclaimer of any intention to oppose "the incentive of reasonable and legitimate private profit" was viewed as especially encouraging to industry generally.

Word from Washington that congressional leaders had reached a tentative agreement which will enable them to bring about an adjournment by the end of next week was cheering to most traders.

The present plan, it was understood here, was for the passage of the housing bill in a slightly modified form and the substitution for the Wagner Labor bill of a brief measure creating industrial relations boards in the various industries.

Brokers were expressing concern over the continued decline of short interest on the Stock Exchange. During May, the Exchange authorities reported, this interest decreased 169,704 shares to a total of 741,038. The aggregate at the beginning of the month was 910,742 shares.

This was the fourth consecutive month in which the short interest has dwindled. The May decline was the largest since last July when the drop was 445,024 shares. Veteran market followers claim that a sizable short interest is always necessary to obviate wide price swings.

This week's automobile production was said to have increased substantially as manufacturers returned to full-time schedules. Cram's reports estimated output for the week at 69,107 units compared with 54,165 in the preceding period. The trend, it was said, remained well ahead of the corresponding week last year when production totaled 54,197 units.

Leading foreign exchanges were narrow, sterling eased ¼ of a cent to $5.06¼ and the French franc was unchanged at 6.61½ cents.

DOLLAR STEADY IN LONDON

By Associated Press

London, June 9—In a quiet foreign exchange market the United States dollar closed today at 5.06¼ to the pound, unchanged from the overnight rate. It opened at 5.06½.

The French franc was slightly firmer and closed at 76.53 to the pound as compared to yesterday's close of 76.63.

The price of gold increased 4 pence to 137 shillings 8½ pence ($34.87) a fine ounce and an amount valued at £248,000 ($1,255,810) was purchased.

May Records Disclose Favorable Facts

New York, June 9—Available May records are not as gloomy as the average business man's state of mind, Business Week says in its issue today.

"Pig iron output," it continues, "gained 14.5 per cent over the April daily rate, reaching the highest level since April, 1931. This hints a similar broad gain for steel; the operating rate is now reaching the peak of the year. It is expected that production during the remaining weeks of June will be maintained close to current levels despite the lessening demand from automobile producers. Sheet and strip mills have as much business as they can handle for the balance of the second quarter, and tin plate mills are holding at 75 per cent of capacity.

"Close observers feel that steel consumption growth by the host of miscellaneous consumers has been greatly underestimated. Oilburner makers, for example, are experiencing a sharp upward trend in new orders and shipments in the spring of the year 1934. Ordinarily the early autumn months prove the best selling season.

"Part of the current quickening in steel activity is undoubtedly due to fear on the part of consumers that the long threatening steel strike may actually occur. The industry itself appears to be more confident about the situation, pointing to the large number of steel workers opposing a strike, to the apparent dissension within the ranks of the union, and to the remarkable strides made in restoring the 1929 levels in employment and hourly earnings.

"With the revised steel code to become effective June 11 with its extension of basing points, modification of pricing system, and establishment of the 8-hour day, the industry begins another phase of code operation. With "fair" prices beyond the control of the code authority, there is some speculation as to the possible operation of the new price provisions.

"Most significant move of the week occurred in the motor industry where price reductions were announced by General Motors and Chrysler, chief competitors of Ford. With the latter announcing his lead in passenger car registration in the first four months of 1934, General Motors was goaded into action to recapture its position.

"In all fairness it must be pointed out that Ford gained his advantage in the first two months of this year when Chevrolet was having exceptional difficulties in assembling its new models.

Somehow there isn't anyone very willing to confirm the rumored reports about "Amos 'n' Andy" taking a vacation next week. Just the same it's in the wind from fairly authentic source. Accordingly the writer should have more to set forth on the subject in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser radio page. Nothing beats finding out from the boys themselves.

Behind the "Mike" With Radio Stars

You Hear These Airliners on Favorite Programs

Big business in a big way, but it's all in a spirit of fun between Portland Hoffa and Fred Allen, who isn't Fred Allen at all but Johnny Sullivan of Somerville. Portland, in real life, is his wife, and plays those dumb roles in the slightly delirious Fred Allen radio skits.

Fred Allen . . . Who isn't Fred Allen at all . . . But Johnny Sullivan of Somerville . . . High School of Commerce. 1911 . . . Born on Groundhog Day . . . In 1894 . . . And named, so he avers, for the "Boston Strong Boy" . . . Who also had a gift of gab . . . Although sometimes a bit more sulphurous than the Fred Allen brand.

This comedian . . . Claimed by radio and stage . . . Juggled his name away back . . . Just as he juggled inanimate articles . . . And jokes . . . While working in a railroad station baggage room . . . Or so he said once.

When 19 . . . And he is now 40 . . . Fred went into an amateur night performance . . . Coming off without a prize . . . At least for juggling . . . But winning a josh in repartee with the manager . . . Which taught Fred that laughter is the thing . . . Because the audience laughed louder . . . At his wisecracking . . . Than they did at his juggling . . . Which was supposed to be serious.

Seeking to try out his stuff on strangers . . . Fred picked some real tetanne ones . . . By going to Australia . . . Where he learned much . . . But profited little . . . Trying to widen glum faces into smiling countenances . . . Then gave it up . . . For one or two reasons . . . But she says she won him . . . In a raffle . . . And now they're both stars on the airwaves . . . And are you listening?
